SEEKS TO ANNUL ROAD CONTRACT

Suit of Joe Brown Against Commissioners And Wilk & Co., Heard
in Court Today.

SIMILAR ACTION DISMISSED

William Emsweller Demands $40,000
Job Because he is Low Bidder
Argument Begun.

The case of Joe Brown, taxpayer of Orange township, against the county board of commissioners and Wilk & Company, road builders, in which it is sought to annul the contract for the Norman Apple highway in Orange township which was awarded to Wilk & Company for $45,789, September 25, of this year, because William Emsweller was the low bidder, was heard by Judge Blair in circuit court today.

A similar suit was brought by Emsweller, the low bidder, shortly after the contract was let, but it was found that the case had to be filed by a taxpayer of the township, which resulted in Brown bringing the present action. A restraining order was issued in the first case and later dissolved. This morning it was dismissed and the costs paid before the second case was started.

The evidence was concluded at 2:15 this afternoon and the argument was opened by John A. Tittsworth, attorney for the plaintiff, who was followed by Donald Smith, attorney for Wilk & Co. A. J. Ross of Anderson-weller's counsel, was next and Attorney Raymond Springer of Connersville, of the defendant's counsel, was next. Gates Sexton, closed the argument for the complainant.

T. J. Hume was the first member of the board of commissioners to be placed on the witness stand. He testified that, after the time limit for bids being received on the day of the contract letting, the three estimates offered in the Apple highway matter, were opened and read in the presence of the bidders and a number of other people, and that the commissioners, which is in accordance with their usual custom, retired to a room to deliberate before awarding the contract. He said they were accompanied by the county attorney and the deputy auditor.

Mr. Hume testified Phil Wilk of Wilk & Co., was called into the room after it was decided to give his concern the contract. He said that he had never been approached either by Wilk or by the county attorney, John H. Kiplinger, in regard to the contract of the Norman Apple road or any other highway. That he had been was one of the allegations of the complaint.

The names of the taxpayers of Orange township who petitioned the commissioners to give the contract to Wilk & Co., for which reason they did, were read in evidence. Attorneys for the plaintiff, in cross-examining Mr. Hume, dwelt considerably on the "custom" of the board and then asked if it were the custom for the board to give contracts to the highest bidder, Mr. Hume said it was not.

William Emsweller, the low bidder, testified he was formerly in the road contracting business but that he had sold his outfit. He declared, however, that he had prepared to purchase a stone crushing outfit and an engine in case he got the Apple road contract.

Attorneys for the plaintiff sought to prove the words "and best" had been inserted in the record of the letting of the contract at the behest of the commissioners. The record reads: "It is now bound by the board of commissioners that the sealed pro-

TO INVITE GROUT TO SPEAK HERE

Federated Charities Will Ask Indianapolis Charity Organization
Secretary to Address Meet.

WERE IN SESSION YESTERDAY

Representatives of various charity organizations met yesterday afternoon in the rest room of the public library and discussed plans looking toward the federation of the charities of Rushville into a more co-ordinate body.

It was deemed a wise plan some time ago for the associations and forces given to charity in Rushville to co-operate and thus get better results and at the same time do away with a good deal of wasteful giving. It was the consensus of the meeting that all of the money given for Thanksgiving should go through the channels of the federated charities so that the giving could be systematized. This will not interfere with the donation of food, however, for thanksgiving dinner.

An effort will be made to persuade C. S. Grout, secretary of the Charity Organization Society of Indianapolis to come here and speak to the federated charities. No other meeting will be held until he can come and deliver an address. Announcement will be made of the date of his coming.

HE ATTEMPTS TO AVOID SORENESS

Finly Gray, Congressman From Sixth
District, Has A New Patronage Plan.

TRIED IN NEWCASTLE FIRST

Asks Post Office Aspirants to Signs
Blanks on Which Pledges
Are Made.

Finly H. Gray, who was re-elected to congress on November 5, is now engaged in settling one of the most troublesome problems of his congressional career—that of determining upon who shall be recommended for postoffice appointments in the Sixth district, says the Newcastle Courier. Congressman Gray took up the matter in Henry county and at a meeting Monday afternoon with prominent Democrats and applicants for appointments as postmaster in Henry county, outlined his position and plans.

At the meeting were Douglas Boiser, Ed Smith, Loring Bundy and T. B. Hunt, Newcastle applicants; Charles Clark, the Knightstown candidate, and Charles Casey, who desires to be postmaster at Shirley. The meeting was held in the office of Strod Hays in the Mouch building and was participated in the Democrats other than those seeking office.

Congressman Gray stated that he desired each applicant for office to fill out a special application blank prepared by him. The blank stated that each man if he secured the office would devote his entire time to its duties and would engage in no other business. It also sets forth that each applicant who failed to secure the recommendation would abide by the result without complaint and without a display of soreness or disappointment.

The application plan met with the approval of every aspirant present at the meeting and all signed them. The plan was also approved by leading Democrats, who urged the congressman to announce his recommendations early, in order that the sore spots that might result could be healed. Speeches of that variety were made by Horace G. Yergin and W. S. Chambers.

A similar plan will be carried out in every county in the district by Congressman Gray. Henry is the first one tried and it is expected that he will take the matter up at once and announce the names of the men that he is to recommend for appointment.

Joint Investigation Into C. H. & D.
Disaster Being Made by Two
Commissioners.

GRAND JURY IS ON JOB ALSO

Hears Testimony of P. J. Hines, Conductor on Freight. Willis York
Up Today.

The joint investigation of the C. H. & D. wreck at Irvington a few weeks ago, which was begun yesterday by the Railroad Commission of Indiana and the Interstate Commerce Commission in Indianapolis, will probably be concluded by late this evening or tomorrow morning. The Marion county grand jury also began a probe of the disaster in Indianapolis yesterday.

The hearing is conducted behind closed doors and the testimony is not disclosed. Those who gave testimony were J. C. Skillman, J. P. Limbaugh, brakeman; E. W. Hoffman, trainmaster of the Indianapolis division of the C. H. & D. Railroad; H. B. Voorhees, general superintendent of transportation of the Cincinnati division of the C. H. & D.; Frank Conner, chief train dispatcher, and Thomas C. Casey, engineer.

Officials of the C. H. & D. road asked that they be allowed to be present at the investigation, but their request was denied.

Representatives of the government, co-operating with the Railroad Commission, are H. W. Belknap, chief inspector of safety appliances of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and J. J. Courts and F. C. Smith, inspectors. David T. Matthews, an inspector for the Indiana commission, is also attending the hearing.

The grand jury heard the testimony of Patrick J. Hines, conductor on the freight train; Ernest Cox and Willis York, members of the freight train crew, who were subpoenaed for yesterday, were told to return today, as they could not be heard before the time set for them to appear before the Railroad Commission.

SOLICIT AID IN SELLING SEALS

Officers of County Organization Ask
Merchants to Dispose of Red Cross Stickers.

BUSINESS MEN RESPONSIVE

Officers of the Rush County Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which will have charge of the sale of Red Cross Seals in the county this season, are visiting merchants and soliciting their assistance. Practically all of the merchants who sold them last year, and many others, have agreed to sell them this year. Placeards will be placed in the windows where they can be found. It is the plan of State Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which is perfecting county organizations in every county in Indiana, to place the Seals on sale simultaneously all over the State Thanksgiving Day.

NEWMAN BOY JOINS NAVY

Young Man Implicated in Bicycle
Robbery Leaves City.

Donald Newman, who the police claim, aided Fred Hatfield in stealing a bicycle belonging to Frank Muire, has escaped arrest by enlisting in the navy. With Hatfield's arrest, young Newman took the tip and left for Indianapolis where it is understood he joined the navy. The bicycle was stolen Friday night but was recovered Saturday and the police have reason to believe that the Hatfield boy and Donald Newman stole the wheel. The Hatfield boy is in jail awaiting trial in the circuit court. The police made several efforts to locate Newman but were unsuccessful. The boy's mother informed policeman Wolter last evening that he had gone to Indianapolis with the intentions of enlisting.

WHOLE FAMILY MAY ATTEND PURDUE

Short Course in January Will Interest Farmers, and Their Wives,
Sons and Daughters.

TO STUDY IN PRACTICAL WAY

Indiana farmers are looking forward with pleasure to the Purdue Farmers' Short Course, to be held January 13-18, 1913.

In this Course, more than 100 men and women have been enrolled each year. They come to study in a practical way, the subjects of Soils, Crops, Live Stock, Horticulture, Dairying, Poultry and Domestic Science. While these people spent a great share of the time in the lecture halls and laboratories, yet the inspiration and knowledge gained from association with one another is a great factor and means much in bringing these people back, year after year.

The program for the next Course has been prepared and is one of the strongest ever offered. Farmers and their wives, sons and daughters, and others interested in Agriculture and the country home, should plan to spend the week of January 13-13 at Purdue.

WILL BE HELD AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Thanksgiving Union Services Are Changed From U. P. Church,
But Minister is Same.

POST OFFICE CLOSSES AT 10

A change has been made in the plans for the customary union Thanksgiving services Thursday morning. It was first announced that the services would be held at the United Presbyterian church, but the place has been changed to the Main Street Christian church. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. C. M. Yocum of the Christian church as first planned.

The closing among the business houses will be general for the greater part of Thanksgiving Day. Most of the merchants will close all afternoon, and some all day. The banks, saloons, elevators and blacksmith shops will be shut all day. The postoffice will be closed at ten o'clock in the morning. One delivery will be made in the city and no delivery will be made on the rural routes.

RABBITS ARE VERY SCARCE THIS YEAR

Zero Weather And Heavy Snows of Last Winter is Cause of Present Famine.

HUNTERS ARE COMPLAINING

Only Pleasure in Winter Sport, They Say, is Exercise From Walking.

Deep snows and continuous zero weather of last winter has made havoc of the rabbits in Rush county and just now it would be a difficult task for one to buy a sufficient number of them in this city for a square meal for an ordinary family.

There is a real and well understood reason why local hunters scour the fields all day and come home empty handed. There is practically no game. At one grocery in this city inquiry developed the fact that not a single rabbit had been offered for sale this year. If this grocery had a supply on hand the retail price probably would be fixed at 20 cents. This is 10 cents higher than the prevailing price last year when rabbits were plentiful.

Then dressed rabbits sold for as low as 10 cents each and every grocer had enough to supply all demands. Rabbits with their clothes on sold last year for even less than a dime each. This year the few that will be offered for sale will remain high, either dressed or undressed.

Practically every hunter who goes afield declares the game crop is the shortest he ever saw. Places where rabbits used to sit and fairly beg to be shot may now be combed with a fine tooth comb and not even a rabbit track seen. The extreme cold weather last winter and the length of time snow remained on the ground is give as the reason for the shortage in rabbits.

When the hunting season opened, pessimistic reports began to filter in from local hunters, but the public generally thought they did not go to the right place and that big hunting tales would soon begin to be told. However, day after day goes by and the hunters came home empty handed or else with, perhaps, one skinny rabbit and two or three quail. They all declare the game is not here to be found and they must be right about it.

Among the causes assigned for the scarcity of rabbits is the cold weather and deep snows of last winter. Temperatures that range from zero down to 20 degrees below continuously for weeks are more than the native rabbit can endure. During such weather food is scarce and hard to get and rabbits perish from starvation.

Deep snows also are hard on rabbits. They can not get about to search for food and soon succumb to hunger and the cold. Cold weather and snows are also hard on quail and for the same reasons birds are scarce this season.

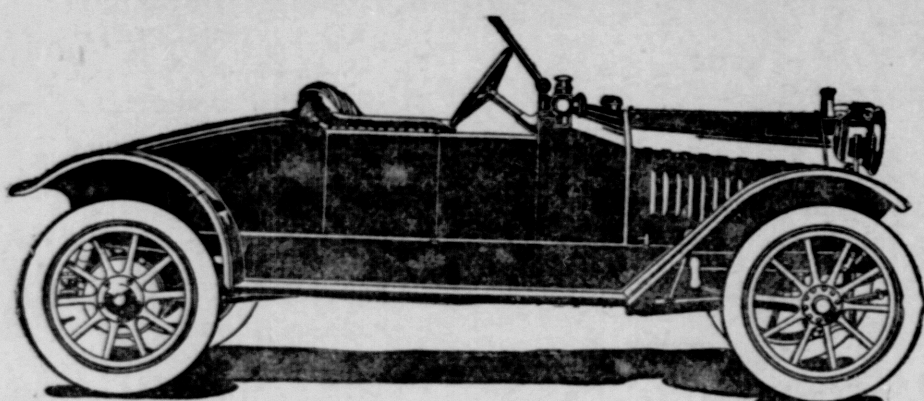

GAS WELL "SHOT."

A gas well was "shot" on the farm of Edward ("Ted") Evans, of near Gwynneville, this afternoon, and a big flow of gas was found. Several excellent wells have been drilled in that neighborhood recently and the residents of Gwynneville and the surrounding community bid fair to have plenty of gas this winter.

RECORD IN CORN CRIBBING MADE

More Corn Put up Last Week Than in Any Six Consecutive Days in Recent Years.

IT'S BIGGER THAN EXPECTED

It is said by farmers, such few as can be seen now, that probably more corn was cribbed in Rush county last week than ever was cribbed before in any six consecutive days in Rush county. Finer weather for this work could hardly be imagined. Every team and wagon and every available hand was pressed into the service, with the result that thousands upon thousands of bushels of the grain have gone safely into cribs and pens.

As the farmers proceed with the crop their first impressions as to its size and soundness have changed little. If anything they have been pleasantly surprised to find it a little bigger and better than they expected. Considerable more than half, though less, perhaps, than two-thirds of the crop is in. The rest, for the most part, will not worry its owners much, whatever sort of weather comes, for it can be husked as occasion offers, and, in case of continued bad weather, could, in many instances, be utilized in other ways besides husking.

"Tells the whole story."

To say that Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is best for children and grown persons and contains no opiates tells only part of the tale. The whole story is that it is the best medicine for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis and other affections of the throat, chest and lungs. Stops laryngitis and has a healing and soothing effect. Remember the name, Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, accept no substitutes.

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

RUBBING IT IN.

(Knox Republican.)
If there is anything on earth that gives us a longing for eternal rest and deep, lamp solitude, it is a man who comes to a town or county, builds up a high a big paying business, grows rich and then squats down on the gold like a door knob, and is too stingy even to let the gravel grind in his own gizzard. A real, genuine 18-karat, stingy selfish man can't be honest, and if he ever gets to heaven and has wings he will fold them up and walk for fear he will ruffle a plume or lose a tail feather. The kind of men who build up a town and county and enjoy life and make the best citizens, and are enterprising, energetic and liberal men, who believe in living and letting others live, do not, when they get a dollar, squeeze it till the Goddess of Liberty feels like she had on a corset. Such squeezing is what causes hard times and stops the circulation of the American eagle. If it were not for the broadgauged, enterprising men, it would be impossible to build up a prosperous city.

Slot Machines Gathered Up and Carted Away.

Hammond, Ind., Nov. 26.—Representing themselves to be deputy sheriffs from Hammond, two unidentified men committed one of the boldest robberies ever reported in the Calumet region at Schneider. With a large automobile van they went from saloon to saloon and to every business place having a slot machine, quickly flashed stars and took the machines and contents to the auto.

The coolness with which the men worked convinced business men they had a right to confiscate the property. Money machines, candy, gum, cigar and all kinds of snoot machines found in a wide-open town were collected until the auto van was filled. Then the robbers drove out of town at full speed. It is believed they obtained more than $1,000. As some of the machines were gambling devices, the owners have no recourse, even if the men are captured.

Secrecy and Completeness of the Mobilization Unprecedented.

VIEWS OF GEN. ALLISON, U. S. A.

Bigger Force Than Turkey's—Bulgaria's Fighting Machine Built Up in Eight Years—Artillery a Strong Factor in the Triumph of the Allies.

In the Journal of the Military Service Institution of the United States, published on Governors island by officers of the army, a leading article deals with the military organizations of Bulgaria, Serbia, Greece, Montenegro and Turkey. The author is Brigadier General John N. Allison.

"Once again," writes General Allison, "the eyes of the civilized world are turned anxiously toward the sick man of southeastern Europe, who is surely and sorely in need of the services of a physician."

General Allison takes up in order the armies of the contending nations, beginning with Turkey. The Turks, according to General Allison's figures, assume to have an infantry total of 37,000 officers and 1,222,000 enlisted men, a cavalry strength of 1,580 officers and 26,800 enlisted men, an artillery strength of 1,032 officers and 29,380 men and 245 officers and 10,470 enlisted men in the engineer corps, besides a medical corps and a transportation department.

"How much of this vast paper force actually exists," General Allison writes, "what proportion of that actually existing can be made available for work in the Balkans, is a matter of pure conjecture. Colonel Brose, late of the information department of the German general staff, estimates such number as 600,000 men of all arms, and this estimate is liberal."

War Strength of Allies.

The war strength of the allies General Allison places at 680,000 men, of whom Bulgaria furnishes 350,000, Serbia 180,000, Greece 100,000 and Montenegro 50,000.

Writing of the Bulgarian army, General Allison points out that the present great fighting machine was organized less than eight years ago. The organization is divided into four parts—the field or active army, the active army reserve, the reserve army and the militia. Prior to the present war the Bulgarian army was distributed in nine divisional areas, each with a headquarters, and these areas knew exactly how many men of all arms could be called upon in the event of war. The divisions were subdivided into districts, and from each district the organization was such as to produce at the earliest possible moment one fully equipped regiment of four battalions.

The Serbian army is singled out for praise by the army officer, as are also the fighting forces of Greece and Montenegro. General Allison calls the Montenegrins an intrepid race of sharpshooters, with an organization so perfect that it can be concentrated within a few days, the army being accompanied, when it is in the field, by the wives and daughters of the soldiers, who carry the ammunition and cook all of the food.

The Greek army, General Allison points out, has learned the lesson of its defeat by Turkey in 1897, and since that time far-reaching administrative changes and disciplinary reforms have been adopted, and the present Greek force is the outgrowth of that transition.

Artillery's Part.

Reports from the seat of war agree on the important part that the artillery has played in the present war. General Allison gives much space to this arm of the service and shows what each of the allied states, as well as Turkey, has in the way of big guns. The Turkish artillery comprises field, horse, mountain artillery and howitzer batteries, fortress artillery and artillery depots. All of the organizations are part of the Turkish regular army, and there is no second line of artillery. On a war footing each field battery has 4 officers and 100 to 120 enlisted men.

The latest available reports give the total Turkish artillery strength as 198 field batteries (1,188 guns), eighteen horse batteries (108 guns), forty mountain batteries (240 guns) and twelve howitzer batteries (72 guns). These guns are all of the various Krupp types. The artillery ammunition train consists of 1,254 wagons.

The Bulgarian artillery numbers about 13,000 officers and men. The artillery consists mainly of 8.7 and 7.5 centimeter Krupp guns, 6.5 centimeter Krupp mountain pieces, Krupp 12 centimeter and Schneider howitzers, Creuzot siege guns and 7.5 centimeter Creuzot quick firers. The number of guns is 1,154.

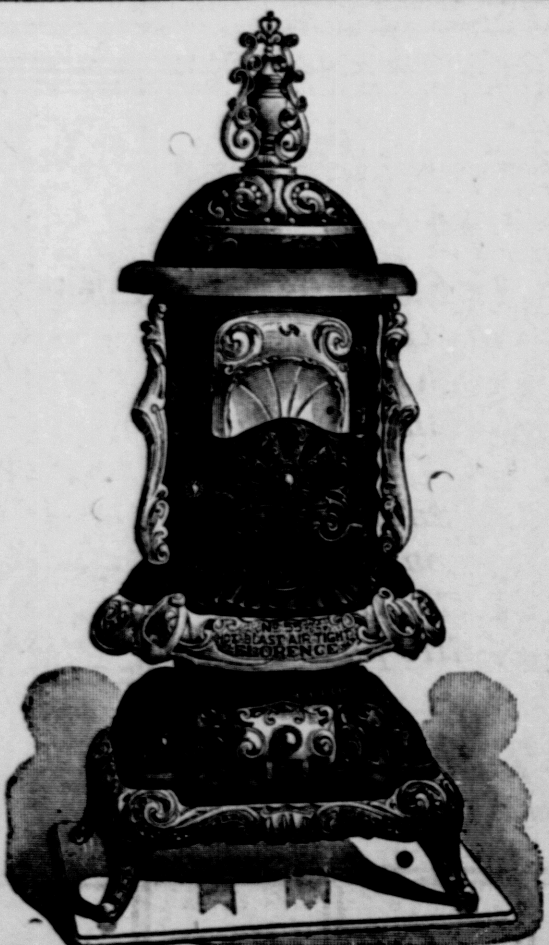

The Servian artillery comprises only Schneider-Canet quick firing guns, while the Montenegrin artillery consists of eighteen siege, twenty-five field and thirty-eight mountain guns, four howitzers, fifteen mortars and eighteen Gatling and Maxim-Nordenfeldt machine guns.

The Greek artillery consists of thirty-six batteries of 7.5 centimeter Schneider-Canet, three heavy and six mountain batteries of six guns each, 7.5 centimeter special barrel. The heavy guns are of 17, 15 and 10.5 centimeters, with two batteries of howitzers.

Progressive Farming.

During the past few years greater strides have been taken in the direction of progressive farming than ever before. There are two reasons why this advancement has been made. First, the farmer himself realizes that the soil can be more profitable by proper care and intelligent management and, secondly, the rapidly increasing population of the country demands that larger crops be raised in order to supply the one hundred millions of people who now live in the United States.

The position of the farmer in this country is a peculiarly important one. Upon him depends almost entirely the supply of many of the necessary foods. The man in the city who is unacquainted with farm life buys a sack of flour or a bag of corn meal and little realizes the work, care and attention given the fields in order that his wants might be supplied. On the other hand the farmer is in a measure dependent upon the city merchant for it is to him that the farm products are sold. The merchant also supplies the farmer with the necessary articles which can not be supplied on the farm. These conditions make these classes mutually dependent and for this reason they should work together and the greatest harmony should prevail.

By various experiments during the past half decade, it has been shown conclusively that the greatest value is not being obtained from the soil. Statistics show that the corn crop this year amounted to 3,169,000,000 bushels valued at $1,850,000,000. This is an average of only thirty bushels to the acre. In experimental fields, however, it has been shown that the ground is capable of producing a hundred bushels to the acre where the proper care is given to the selection of seed, plowing, fertilizing and cultivation. During the past few years hundreds of acres of ground in our own country have been made to produce larger and better crops by proper fertilization, which costs but a comparative small sum in the first instance but results in larger returns to the land owner.

The short course, such as will be conducted in Cambridge City will aid materially in bringing about the desired results. The lectures and demonstrations are given by instructors who have gone over the ground thoroughly and after years of close study are prepared to impart their knowledge to the farmer. Doubtless many suggestions can be obtained from the short course lectures which are the result of years of study, and which if properly applied can be adopted at once in practical agriculture resulting in larger crops and a general improvement of rural conditions.

The national government and state has been aiding the farmer in every way they can. When it was found that some conditions could be bettered, steps have been taken to bring about the improvement and expense has not been considered. A great opportunity is knocking at the door of the farmer, but the sole responsibility rests with him whether the offer is accepted or rejected. Many of the farmers are awakened to the situation and have not only grasped this opportunity but are using their influence to interest others. With the various agencies which are now at work it is a safe prediction that greater progress will be made during the next five years than has ever been recorded in the same period of time.

Mr. Bryan suggests that ex-presidents should have oratorical privileges on the floor of Congress. That would have suited Andrew Johnson. As it was, he returned to the Senate where debate is unlimited.

As the Democratic platform declares protection to be unconstitutional this question of organic law will become acute at the extra session unless the Democrats forget it completely.

If the Balkan nations will only keep up the good old custom of monthly massacres, the Powers will no doubt let them occupy European Turkey.

Only nine out of 28 governors were re-elected this fall. The others no doubt knew too much about the way the states were being governed.

The desire of the lambs to retain their pelts through the cold winter will not promote a merry Christmas for Wall street.

WHAT WAS THE MATTER?

An election story which concerns John F. Moses is just now being told though it is several days since the election.

Being a rather ardent Republican Mr. Moses arose from bed about two o'clock on the morning after the election and called Republican headquarters to get some of the returns. He got nothing but the busy buzz and called Democratic headquarters. Sam Trabue, Democratic chairman, answered the telephone.

"How does it look for Rush county?" queried Mr. Moses.

"It looks like we had carried it by about five hundred," declared Mr. Trabue enthusiastically.

"How about the State?"

"Ralston carried it by at least a hundred thousand."

"And the United States?"

"A dispatch received from the New York Herald just now states that Wilson carried every State but two."

"What was the matter with them?" asked Mr. Moses and hung up the receiver.

Youthful Knightstown Girl Swears

Maggie Falcon Gave Her Beer in Newcastle.

LATTER FINED $25 AND COSTS

Bertha Lawson Says Attempt Was Made to Induce Her to go With Colored Men.

The giving of a bottle of beer by Mrs. Maggie Pressley Falcon, the Greenfield woman, who was arrested in Newcastle last Wednesday night with Bertha Lawson, a nineteen-year-old girl and Aaron and Ben Bailey, colored proved a rather costly operation, as the woman was fined $25 and costs, amounting in all to $35, at the session of the police court Monday says the Newcastle Courier. She could not pay the assessment and went to jail.

The case was up Saturday morning before Mayor Barnard and was continued until this morning so that the evidence of the Bailey brothers could be secured. The accused woman in the hearing Saturday denied giving the beer to the girl and said that it was given by Aaron Bailey. The Bailey brothers denied the accusation Monday and were supported by an affidavit by the Lawson girl, which was offered in evidence.

The affidavit is regarded by the police as an arraignment of the Falcon woman on a serious charge. It shows that she persuaded the Lawson girl to come to this city. The document reads as follows:

"State of Indiana, County of Henry, ss:

"Bertha Lawson, being first duly sworn, says that she will be 19 years of age in December, 1912, and that her home is at Vanceburgh, Ky. That she is employed in a laundry at Knightstown, Indiana. That on the 17th day of November, 1912, Maggie Pressley Falcon came after her and took her a ride in a buggy and then coaxed her to go to Greenfield, Ind.

"That she stayed at the home of Maggie Pressley Falcon, and who is married to an Italian, at Greenfield, until the twentieth day of November, when said Falcon woman persuaded her to go to Newcastle, Ind.

"That when they arrived at Newcastle, Indiana, the Falcon woman hunted up Tip Hairston, a colored man, and got him to go after some beer for her. That said Hairston and the Falcon woman went down the street together, and returned in a short time with some beer in bottles. That the Falcon woman gave this affiant, the said Bertha Lawson, one bottle of the said beer. That Aaron Bailey was present at the time the Falcon woman handed the said bottle of beer to this affiant.

"That this affiant drank the said bottle of beer and became partly intoxicated therefrom.

"That the Falcon woman told her that these colored men were friends of hers and that she wanted her to go with one of them and that this affiant refused. Then the said Falcon woman told affiant that she was up here with her and could not get home without she showed her the way and she would have to go with the colored man. Then the police arrested them and they were taken to police headquarters.

"She says that she was afterwards arrested at Knightstown. Further affiant saith not.

"BERTHA LAWSON.

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

RESPONSIBILITY.

(Columbus Republican.)

The Indianapolis Star, a paper explosively and always abusively progressive—that is to say, anti-everything but Rooseveltism, in order to have one more excuse to lambast republicans who stayed with the party during the late unpleasantness, imagines it hears rumors of "commercial hesitation and retrenchment," which, if a fact and interpreted as the Star would have it, presages business depression and ultimately panic conditions throughout the country. The Star hopes that the scarecrow about tariff revision hurting prosperity has been worn so threadbare as to frighten nobody. So does The Republican hope so, but if true that the mere threat of tariff revision as indicated by the Star—the first newspaper to do so, so far as observed—causes rumors of "commercial hesitation and retrenchment," what will be the effect on the industrial interests of the country when a democratic congress assembles in extraordinary session next April, upon the call of a democratic president, for the express purpose of tinkering with the tariff?

But this is not what we started out to say. The Star blames the whole situation upon the republican voters—the ones who voted for Taft because he was the nominee of their party, and the others who voted for Wilson as a protest against Rooseveltism. According to the Star, had those republicans who voted for Wilson cast their votes for Roosevelt, he, instead of Wilson, would have been elected, and all this tariff agitation would have been avoided, because says the Star, the progressive party is pledged to protection. So, indeed, is the republican party pledged to protection, and its pledges in that direction, have been redeemed time after time as is evidenced by the remarkable and unprecedented prosperity that is now menaced by the threat of democratic tariff tinkering.

According to The Republican's way of thinking republicans who voted for Wilson are not responsible for the condition that confronts us. The number of such delinquent republicans was not great even if the Star does insist they were numerous enough to bring about Wilson's election and Roosevelt's defeat. The Republican's facilities for making such guess are equal to the Star's, who's assertion that they are chargeable with such dire results is likewise guesswork. All know that the split in the republican party engineered by Roosevelt and fostered by such agencies as the Star, was responsible for the election of Wilson and should commercial disaster result from tariff agitation the people will know exactly where to place the blame.

The Star abhors republicans who voted for Wilson in preference to Roosevelt, if there were any such, as well as those who voted for Taft in preference to Roosevelt, but glorifies those who bolted their party and its nominee to vote for Roosevelt. In a nut shell this is the Star's religion and it decrees that those who believe or contend otherwise should be cast into the outer darkness.

If the Star was ever a genuine republican paper its readers might give serious consideration to what it has to say on political questions, especially as between republicans and bull moosers, but its measure has been taken and it don't cut much ice.

The state of Indiana by John W. Hannan, Joseph L. Kempton and Clara J. Kempton, husband and wife, says the Richmond Palladium.

The complaint asks that the court order the land condemned and appoint appraisers to fix the value of it. The land in question comprises two farms in Center township, one of 110 acres and the other of 40 acres, which the institution desires for colonization purposes.

That the board of trustees has determined that the institution must have this ground and that the trustees have attempted to purchase it, is alleged in the complaint. The plaintiffs assert that they have offered a reasonable price for the land but that the defendants refuse to sell.

WILL GET CHECKS FROM WASHINGTON

Old Soldiers Will Receive Next Quarterly Pension Vouchers Direct From Headquarters.

AND NOT THROUGH AGENCY

The Rush county and Rushville veterans of the Civil and subsequent wars will receive their next quarterly checks or vouchers direct from Washington instead of from the Indianapolis agency, as heretofore. The checks can be cashed at any bank like an ordinary check. They must, however, be endorsed by the pensioner and two witnesses, to whom the pensioner must show that he is the rightful owner of the check, and that his certificate number is the same as the number on the check. No further red tape is necessary. The new plan of paying pensions takes the work entirely out of the hands of pension agents who formerly executed the vouchers received by the soldiers. The vouchers were then sent back and at the next quarter a check for the voucher already executed and another unexecuted voucher for the next pension day were sent to the pensioners.

The new method will also save the pensioner trouble, as all he will be forced to do will be to go to the bank with his check and certificate, endorse his check and have two witnesses do the same. Under the old method a trip to the pension agent was necessary.

Pensions will be sent to the last known address. If a pensioner changes his address he should notify Washington, giving his former address and his new one. Otherwise his pension will be sent to the old address.

AMUSEMENTS

"When Father Had His Way" is the title of a Lubin drama, the first picture at the Princess tonight. Orma Hawley is featured and the picture is said to be very good. "The Desperado" is a Pathe western drama. Tomorrow night a Biograph feature "Two Daughters of Eve" with Henry Walthall in the leading role, will be shown. A matinee will be given Thursday.

"The Senator Keeps House," with William H. Crane in the leading role, comes to English's in Indianapolis as the Thanksgiving day attraction. The engagement begins with a special matinee performance Thursday and continues the remainder of the week, with a second matinee Saturday. The comedy, and it concerns the attempt of a senator—as the title suggests—to keep house. He fails, and a woman comes to his rescue to straighten out affairs and put things in order. A current of politics mixes itself with the romance of the piece, and the two combined afford Mr. Crane excellent opportunity to display his own peculiar ability. It is interesting to note that this is Mr. Crane's fiftieth season on the stage.

Henry Heckman will move soon to his new property bought of Tom Sullivan in Brookside.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Parting of the Ways.

THE two weeks which followed the Bivens ball were the happiest Harriet Woodman had known since Nan's shadow had fallen across her life. Every moment was crowded with the work of preparing for her trip, except the hours she could not refuse Stuart, who had suddenly waked to the fact that something beautiful was going out of his life.

Harriet watched him with keen joy and deep in her heart a secret hope began to grow slowly.

The day she sailed he refused to go with her to the pier.

"Why, Jim, you must come with me!" she protested.

"No, I can't, little pal. Goodby."

He watched the cab roll down Fourth street toward the pier while a great wave of loneliness overwhelmed him. At night the doctor was not at home. Stuart rapped on his door next morning and got no answer. The girl said he had spent the night out—she didn't know where.

As Stuart was about to leave for his office the doctor entered. His bloodshot eyes were sunken deep behind his brows, his face haggard and his shoulders drooped. Stuart knew he had tramped the streets all night in a stupor of hopeless misery.

Stuart took his outstretched hand and led him into the library. "I know why you tramped the streets; the old house is very lonely."

"I never knew what loneliness meant before!" The big hand fell in a gesture of despair.

Stuart pressed his hand. "I understand. I'm younger than you, doctor, but I, too, have walked that way alone. You're all in; you must go to bed and sleep."

When Stuart returned early from his work in the afternoon he found a group of forlorn women and children standing beside the stoop. A pale, elfish looking boy of ten, whose face appeared to be five years older, sat on the lower step crying.

"What's the matter, kiddie?" he asked kindly.

"I wants de doctor—me mudder's sick. She'll croak before mornin' ef he don't come—dey all wants him." He waved his dirty little hand toward the others. "He ain't come around no more for a week. The goil says we can't see him—he's asleep."

"I'll tell him you're here. The doctor's been ill himself."

He urged the doctor to go at once to see his patients. The work he loved would restore his spirits. He was dumfounded at the answer he received.

"No, no! I'm in no mood to work. I couldn't help them. I'd poison and kill them all, feeling as I do today. A physician can't treat the sick unless there's healing in his own soul. I'd bring death, not life, into their homes. Tell them to go away!"

Stuart emptied his pockets of all the money he had in a desperate effort to break their disappointment.

"The doctor's too ill to see you now," he explained. "He sent this money for you and hopes it will help you over the worst until he can come."

He divided the money among them, and they looked at it with dull disappointment. They were glad to get it.

but what they needed more than money was the hope and strength of their friend's presence.

"Doctor," Stuart began gently, "I've known you for about fifteen years. You're the only father I've had in this big town, and you've been a good one. You've been acting strangely for the past two weeks. You're in trouble."

"The greatest trouble that can come to any human soul," was the bitter answer. "But," he paused, and his eyes stared at the ceiling as he groaned. "I've got to bear it. What's the use to whine?"

Stuart stepped close and slipped his arm about the stalwart figure. His voice was tender.

"Come, doctor; you're not fooling me. I've known you too long. There's only one man on earth for whom I'd do as much as I would for you—my own gray haired father down south. Come now; tell me what's the trouble?"

Stuart could feel the big form sway and tremble under the stress of over-

"You—did—what?"

Overwhelming emotion, and his arm pressed a little closer. And then the tension suddenly broke.

The doctor sank into a chair and looked up with a helpless stare.

"Yes, Jim, I will. I'll tell you." And he related his experiences in the Bivens mansion, ending with:

"I stole—a—case—of—jewels!" Stuart sprang to his feet, with an exclamation of horror.

"You—did—what?"

"Yes," the doctor went on hoarsely. "I stole a case of his jewels and sent my girl abroad. I'm going to plead guilty now and go to prison. I shall never again lift my head in the haunts of men."

Stuart sobbed in anguish.

"You see, boy, I failed when put to the test. It doesn't make any difference about my reputation. Character only counts, and I'm a thief."

"Shut up!" Stuart cried fiercely, seizing his arm. "Don't say that again and don't talk so loudly. Whatever you did you were insane when you did it."

"Maybe it was a mistake. I don't know. I couldn't think then. I only know now that life is impossible any more, and I'm ready to go. You can send me to prison at once, Jim. I'm glad you are the district attorney."

"But I'm not. I resigned my office this morning to go into business for myself. I had only another month to serve. You're not going to prison if I can help it."

"But I don't want you to help it. It's the only place to go now—you see, boy, I can't live with myself any more! Besides I'm old and played out; the world don't need me any longer."

"Well, I need you," Stuart broke in, "and you're not going to give up this fight as long as I'm here."

"I'm a failure; it's no use."

"But you've forgotten some things."

The younger man said tenderly.

"You've helped to make my life what it is—you haven't failed in that. You gave your blood to your country when she needed it—you didn't fail in that. You have forgotten the thousands you have helped, the hope and cheer and inspiration that passed into their lives through yours. We'll go to Bivens' house tonight. We'll tell him the truth. We'll return the value of his jewels. I'll get the money to make good what you owe him"—His voice broke. "Oh, why, why, why didn't you let me know? I've influence with Bivens. He will drop the matter and no one on earth will know save we three."

"But you don't understand, Jim," the broken man protested, feebly. "I tell you I've given up. I can't take your money. I can't pay. I tell you I've given up. I can't take your money. I can't pay it back."

"You can pay it back, too, if you like. Harriet will be earning thousands of dollars in a few years. Her success is sure."

A faint smile lighted the father's face.

"Her success is sure. Isn't it?" he asked with the eagerness of a child. And then the smile slowly faded.

"But I shall not be here to see it."

"Yes, you will. I'm running your affairs now, and you've got to do what I say. Get ready. We are going to see Bivens."

Bivens refused point blank at first to see Woodman and ordered his servant to put him out of the house and ask Stuart to remain for a conference.

Stuart drew from his case a card and wrote a message to Nan:

Imperative that I see Cal at once in the presence of my friend on a matter of grave importance. Please send him down. He is stubborn.

Bivens came in a few minutes, shook hands cordially with Stuart and ignored Woodman.

"I want to see you alone with the doctor," the young lawyer began, "where we cannot possibly be overheard."

"I have nothing to say to this man, but for your sake all right. Come up to the library."

Once in the room and the door closed the doctor sank listlessly into a chair, seeing nothing, hearing nothing. His deep, sunken, bloodshot eyes were turned within. The outer world no longer made any impression.

Stuart began:

"Cal, you and I have been friends since boyhood. I'm going to ask my first favor of you tonight."

"For yourself, all right. You've got the answer before you ask it. If you've come to ask me to settle with old Woodman for any imaginary claim he has, you're wasting your breath. I won't hear it. So cut it."

CONSPIRACY AND FELONY CHARGED

Distinguished Men Face Bar of Federal Court.

ECHO OF MINE PROMOTION DEAL

Among Those Charged With Using the Mails For the Purpose of Getting Money by Deception Are Julian Hawthorne, Josiah Quincy and Dr. William J. Morton, Son of Man Who Gave to World Beneficent Ether.

New York, Nov. 26.—After a day's sifting a jury has been made up for the trial of Julian Hawthorne, son of Nathaniel Hawthorne, and himself a writer of wide popularity; Josiah Quincy, twice mayor of Boston and assistant secretary of state under President Cleveland; Dr. William J. Morton, son of the physician who discovered how valuable ether is as an anesthetic, and Albert Freeman, who hitherto has achieved notoriety as a promoter of mining companies. There are three indictments against each of the defendants for conspiracy and one for a felony. The felony is based on the charge that they used the mails to get money under false pretenses, and the conspiracy consists in the charge that they used the mails fraudulently.

When the four defendants were called before Judge Hough in the United States district court, John McKinnon, who was secretary and treasurer of the mining companies with which the defendants were identified and who was indicted with them, was not lined up with them. This led to the report that he would be a witness against his former associates, but on this subject the United States district attorney, Mr. Wise, maintained a satisfied silence. It was noticeable that Mr. Hawthorne and Dr. Morton, both white haired and mustached, sat together during the proceedings, while Freeman and ex-Mayor Quincy offered advice in the selection of jurors, had their heads together a good part of the time.

It is the promotion and operation of the Temagami Cobalt mines, limited; Elk Lake Cobalt mines, limited; the Hawthorne Silver and Iron mines, limited, and the Montreal-James mines, limited, that the defendants are accused of having used the mails for fraudulent purposes.

The defense asked to have the indictments dismissed on the ground that the letters which were written by Mr. Hawthorne to college professors, professional and business men, exploiting the stock were in themselves harmless pieces of literature and did not constitute a crime. Judge Hough instructed the talesmen what they would have to determine was whether the promises and predictions made by Hawthorne and his associates were for the purposes of getting money by deception.

PEACEFUL COMPROMISE

A Promise of Better Things For the Dominican Republic Heard.

Washington, Nov. 26.—A compromise program has been agreed upon in the Dominican republic for the preservation of peace, according to word received at the state department, and the early return to the United States of the American commissioners is predicted.

The present administration in the Dominican republic will resign. Congress met in extra session today to elect a successor to Eladio Victoria, who now heads the Dominican government. This successor will probably be Archbishop Noel, who has been agreed on for the office of provisional president.

It is believed at the state department that the compromise agreed upon will result in many reforms in administration which will make possible the restoration of tranquility in the republic. It is proposed to install the provisional president not later than Dec. 1. He will probably hold office until the national elections can be held.

Made Incendiary Statements.

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 26.—A threat to incite a Haymarket riot in this city, made while speaking to the employees of the La Tessa Knitting mills and the Mohawk Valley Cap factory, caused the arrest of W. E. Clark of Chicago, representative of the Industrial Workers of the World. He was ordered arrested after he had made a number of incendiary statements to the textile workers.

VINCENT ASTOR "BUSINESS MAN"

His $100,000,000 Inheritance Forces Him to Leave Harvard.

HOUSE'S YOUNGEST HEAD.

Wealthiest Young Man In the World Was a Frail Baby Whose Life Was Saved by Unremitting Care—As a Lad His Life Was Twice Saved by Surgical Operations.

William Vincent Astor, who on his majority, Nov. 15, inherited about $100,000,000 and became the American head of the house of Astor, has had his college career terminated by the assumption of the responsibilities of such vast wealth. He is "going into business" with a fortune, having which 999 men out of a thousand would be well content to quit it.

The tragedy of the Titanic, which left him fatherless, at once foreshadowed his leaving Harvard, though the young man at the time expressed his intention of completing the course. No Astor ever succeeded to the headship at his age. His father was twenty-eight before he succeeded, and his grandfather was sixty. His great-grandfather, John Jacob 3d, was fifty-three, and his father, William Backhouse 1st, was fifty-six.

No such rugged physical figure as that which has just passed has entered upon this tremendous responsibility. Vincent Astor normally looks more boyish than he is. He has his father's height, but not his weight by forty pounds. He has not his breadth of shoulders by three inches, and the father's doggedness shows only in the son's chin. For the past three years father and son were almost inseparable companions.

Life Saved by Unremitting Care.

Vincent Astor was christened William Vincent. He was born in the old homestead at New York five months before his grandfather died and his father became head of the house. He was so frail a baby that only unremitting care kept him alive. He lived the loneliest of little boyhoods because of this, and when other children romped in the open air he sat over a toy piano in a nursery to which no playmates ever came. Servants saved him every exertion. Nurses were always with him. Physicians awaited calls to him that had precedence over all others.

When Vincent Astor was twelve Dr. William T. Bull saved him from death by appendicitis. In less than a year he was saved from death by another surgical operation, this time for a growth in the throat following an attack of mumps. He was taken every year then to St. Moritz or the Riviera because of bronchial trouble, and his education was being directed by a tutor who lived with him in a house taken for his exclusive use at Tuxedo.

Six years of this unremitting attention brought Vincent Astor to a degree of health it had been thought he never could attain. Newport was astonished to see him come there five years ago and take an active part in the sports of the summer colony. It was still more astonished at the importance automobiling had in his interests, for he drove his own car and drove it with daring skill, although he was only sixteen.

Didn't Stay Long at Eton.

Then Vincent Astor went to Eton, but soon returned—to be followed by strange tales of the amusement of the English public school at his manner of living. Friends of the boy said he had done nothing more than take an ample wardrobe with him, but the gossip was that he displayed his wealth in a dozen other ways.

St. George's, at Newport, gave the boy the rest of the training he needed for admission to Harvard, where he began a three years' course last September.

Last fall it was said that Vincent Astor had entered Harvard "with the distinction of having more clothes than any man at the university."

ARBITRATION DECISION HAS BEEN ACCEPTED

There Will Be No Strike of Locomotive Engineers.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and the committeemen representing the fifty-two railroads interested in the decision just handed down by the board of arbitration, in a session behind closed doors in this city, decided that the decision shall be accepted. This means there will be no strike and that the agreement under which the locomotive engineers are working and which has only five more months to run, until May 1, 1913, will be lived up to by the engineers.

When asked what would be the attitude of the locomotive firemen and if the latter would make demands, Mr. Stone remarked that he could not speak for the firemen. It is believed, however, that the firemen will make no further demands.

INSANITY PLEA

This Will Be Set Up in Effort to Save
Mrs. Maud Ping.

Bedford, Ind., Nov. 26.—The trial of Mrs. Maude Ping, charged with first degree murder for the killing of her husband, James Ping, whom she shot to death following a quarrel at the supper table, has begun in the Lawrence circuit court.

The tragedy occurred on the evening of April 25. James Ping, aged thirty-two, was seated at the supper table, with one of his small children on his knee. His young wife entered, placed a revolver near his head and pulled the trigger. The bullet pierced his skull above the left ear, killing him instantly. Walking into her sleeping room and throwing herself on the bed, Mrs. Ping shot herself through the breast. The bullet missed her heart and after some weeks she recovered.

Mrs. Ping's defense is emotional insanity. She was Ping's second wife, and was only nineteen years old. A few weeks before the shooting she had lost a baby, and intense grief, her attorneys will contend, affected her mind. Furthermore, they will attempt to show that the couple's married life was unhappy, because of the girl's jealousy. They will try to prove the jealousy well founded.

AWAITING VERDICT

Jury Now Has the Case of Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso.

Salem, Mass., Nov. 26.—The fate of the three I. W. W. leaders, Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso, who were accused of being concerned in the killing of Anna Lopez during a strike riot at Lawrence on Jan. 29, now is in the hands of the jury.

Judge Quinn, in charging the jury, instructed that the evidence against Ettor and Giovannitti did not warrant a first degree verdict. If guilty, the verdict, he said, must be second degree murder. Caruso might be found guilty of first degree murder, but none of the defendants, under the form of indictment, could be adjudged guilty of manslaughter.

Train Crashed Into Handcar.

Richmond, Ind., Nov. 26.—One man was killed and another injured when a handcar, on which a half dozen bridge carpenters were riding, was run down by a Chesapeake & Ohio passenger train south of Richmond. Perry Shilts, twenty-one years old, living in Richmond, was hurled fifty feet and received injuries from which death resulted in a few minutes. Other members of the bridge crew escaped by jumping from the handcar.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 26.—Arthur Capper will be the next governor of Kansas. For some time after the election the question was in doubt, as the contest was close. Mr. Capper is the editor of the State Capital and several weekly publications.

MANY RUMORS REND EUROPE

Prospect of General War is Disquieting.

CHANCELLORIES ARE SILENT

Little Information of a Definite Character Is Permitted to Issue From Behind the Doors of the Various Chancelleries of State Where Issues of World Import Are Overshadowing All Other Subjects of Discussion.

London, Nov. 26.—There is today throughout Europe, though in the chancelleries the diplomats talk hopefully of the eventual settlement of the Balkan difficulty without a general war, a general feeling of unrest that is not quieted by the refusal of the governments to give any hint to their peoples as to what is in the wind. It has been a day of rumors, of the telling of sinister stories and the prompt denial of the same.

Vienna hears that an Austrian consul has disappeared mysteriously. He was last heard of in a town captured by the Servians. Servia has refused to define her attitude until she is done with the Turk. She is said to be fortifying Belgrade. On the heels of this report there comes a story that Austria was about to present an ultimatum to Servia and would act independently of the other powers.

And while the troops are being mobilized throughout Europe and there is talk of war on all men's lips at the little village of Baghtche, near Blyuk-Chekmendye, the plenipotentiaries of Turkey and Bulgaria are discussing the preliminaries for the negotiations for an armistice.

They met on neutral ground. Beyond the general belief that the Bulgarians, exhausted by the war, are willing to modify their first demands rejected by Turkey, and the intimation that this was now going on, nothing about the conference was given out. An armistice of eight days is reported to have been arranged pending the outcome of these conferences, and during that time the two armies will hold the positions they now occupy along the Tchataldja lines.

The story of the disappearance of the Austrian consul at Prisdend, Herr Prochaska, comes from the Vienna correspondent of the Daily Mail. He says that the dispute between Austria and Servia has been very seriously aggravated by the rumors that the consul has been done away with. According to his dispatch Herr Edl, the Austrian emissary dispatched to get into communication with Herr Prochaska, arrived at Uskub on Saturday, expecting to go to Prisdend. According to Herr Edl the Servian authorities told him that as the railroad communication with Prisdend had been interrupted, he could not go on. Whereupon he said that whether the communication was stopped or not he would go on. The correspondent adds that enigmatic behavior of Servia complicates the situation dangerously, and that if King Peter pursues his course it is the feeling in Vienna that an ultimatum will be at once sent to Belgrade.

SHIFT OF FORCE

Allies Now Turning Their Forces
Toward the Dardanelles.

Constantinople, Nov. 26.—It is reported here that the Bulgarians have withdrawn considerable forces from the Tchataldja lines, sending them to Adrianople and the Dardanelles. Vigorous action by a Greek and Bulgarian force against the Dardanelles is expected unless the armistice is promptly effected.

There is a divergence of opinion among the ambassadors of the powers here regarding the port's demand for the withdrawal of the foreign naval contingents. The Austrian and German envoys agree with the port's view that the presence of the marines is not needed, but the other members of the diplomatic corps consider their presence in Constantinople as still necessary.

Peace and tranquility now prevail around Tchataldja. The Turks are making the most of the respite to dig cover. They are in possession of the Hademken valley and have pushed their advanced posts to the hills on the western side of the valley near the village of Tchataldja. Many additional earthworks have been constructed. The Turks are in a very strong position and full of hope. It would certainly be a costly undertaking for the allies to force the splendid defensive position. Nothing is known regarding the negotiations for an armistice beyond the fact that the meeting place has been chosen.

A Verdict Is in Doubt.

Goshen, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The trial jury of Burton W. Gibson, accused of murdering Mrs. Szabo, after being out eight hours, announced that it could not agree and asked that Justice Tompkins be notified. It was said that the jury stood 9 to 3 for conviction. Judge Tompkins ordered the jury to go back and make another attempt to agree.

FATAL EXPLOSION IN A DRY STARCH HOUSE

Dust Lets Go and Many Are Killed at Waukegan.

Waukegan, Wis., Nov. 26.—In an explosion in the dry starch house of the Corn Products company at this place, ten laborers were killed, a like number injured and five are missing. Immediately following the explosion the building, which was a three-story structure, took fire and burned to the ground, and it is believed by the police that some of the missing were cremated in the ruins. The injured were hurried to hospitals. Three of them are in a critical condition.

There were fifty-five employees in the building at the time of the explosion. All of them were known by number instead of by name, and because of this fact identification of some of the victims has not been established.

Most of the employees were at work on the ground floor and to this fact they owe their lives. The explosion was of such force that it shook the town and broke windows in stores and dwellings half a mile away, hurled the workmen against the side of the building and to the floor.

The work of rescuing those still alive began at once and the injured were rushed to hospitals.

HORRID DESIGN TOLD IN COURT

Dynamiters Planned to Destroy
Los Angeles.

McMANIGAL CONCLUDES STORY

As a Climax to His Sensational Testimony in Federal Court, Government's Chief Witness Tells Jury That John McNamara Approached Him With a Proposition Literally to Wipe California City Off the Map.

Indianapolis, Nov. 26.—One of the stories that Orrie E. McManigal told on the witness stand in continuing his testimony in the dynamiting cases was how desperate John J. McNamara had become within a week of his arrest by the Burns detectives and to what lengths he proposed to go in carrying out the great dynamiting campaign of 1911.

For some reason J. J. McNamara felt a strong resentment against the city of Los Angeles, and he rarely spoke of it without an oath, said McManigal. He could not get over the feeling that there ought to be a larger program of destruction for that city, said witness. McManigal was around headquarters in April, 1907, and on the seventh day of that month the plan was unfolded to him by J. J., which, witness said, was the setting of numerous fires in different parts of the city with machines made for that purpose and the coincident blowing up of the water works system, so that the fire department would be helpless in extinguishing the flames. The time was to be fixed so that the fire would be carried to all parts of the city by favoring winds and the place would be wiped out of existence.

Another plot of which McNamara spoke, but which did not reach any particular development of means in their talks, said the witness, was to organize for a holdup at the Indianapolis Speedway in May following, when, he said, there would be not less than $150,000 from receipts in the offices of the Speedway company. The plan was to have the holdup men provided with autos and to make the attack at a certain hour when the crowd's attention would be centered on the races.

"We may have to kill two or three, but what the hell is the difference, if we get the $150,000," said McNamara, according to the dynamiter.

McManigal told of being taken to Detective Reed's house in Chicago, where in a conversation J. B. said: "Every man for himself." McManigal said that in a conversation later with W. J. Burns he (McManigal) told in substance what he knew about the dynamiting plots.

The dynamiter was then turned over to the defense and cross-examination by Senator Kern was begun. Asked by Senator Kern if Hockin terrorized him into going into this work, witness replied that he had. Witness gave a list of explosions that he had pulled off and the amounts he had received for them. They aggregated twenty and he got a total of $3,290.

SPOOK DOINGS

One of the Features of a Trial in Progress at Laporte.

Laporte, Ind., Nov. 26.—Spiritualistic mediums will play a large part in the second trial of the noted Leeds will case, which is in progress in the Porter circuit court.

Mrs. Amelia Leeds, who died possessed of great wealth, her fortune being estimated at from a half to a million dollars, bequeathed the largest part of the estate to her daughter, Mrs. Cushman, a Michigan City society woman, almost disinheriting the son, Offley Leeds, who is the plaintiff in the action.

Mrs. Leeds was a spiritualist, and in seances with mediums she claimed to have been divinely ordered to give her fortune to her daughter. The first trial of the case, which continued nearly two months, resulted in the disagreement of the jury.

Three Killed on Track.

Valparaiso, Ind., Nov. 26.—Frank Conley, aged thirty-five; Joe Ressler, aged thirty-two, and Edward Peters, aged thirty-two, unmarried, were instantly killed three miles east of McCool, by a Baltimore & Ohio flyer. There is a double track at McCool. The south track was occupied by an eastbound freight train and the men stepped to the north track, when the flyer, traveling at sixty miles an hour, crashed into them, hurling the three bodies 200 feet from the track.

Fast Train Split Switch.

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 26.—Although four sleepers and two coaches left the track from a Monon train at Ellettsville, no one was seriously injured. All the passengers were badly shaken up, however. The train was traveling thirty-five miles an hour, when it split the switch.

A Boy and a Gun.

Bowling Green, Ind., Nov. 26.—While examining a pistol at his home, two miles southwest of here, Ben Stwalley, aged fourteen, son of Mrs. Barbere Stwalley, accidentally shot in the breast. The bullet entered the boy's left breast about an inch below the heart.

RECORD CROWD WILL SEE GAME

Rushville-Maxwell Contests Thursday Afternoon Promises to Establish New Attendance Mark

BOTH TEAMS ARE CONFIDENT

Locals Expect Hard Battle From Auto-Makers—Newcastle Coming on Special Train.

Thanksgiving Day in Rushville would hardly be complete without a foot ball game and the one this year between the locals and the Maxwells of Newcastle promises to surpass any of recent years. The Rushville team which will do battle Thursday afternoon with the Automakers is composed of local boys, many of whom were stars in high school and college and the foot ball fans are assured that they will put up their best game against Newcastle.

The Thanksgiving game has always been a big event here and the game this year will probably be attended by a record crowd. The Newcastle team will be accompanied by a crowd of rooters, coming on a special train over the L. E. & W. The train will arrive here shortly before noon. Considerable rivalry exists between the two teams and both will be out to win. The Rushville team is well aware that it will be up against a severe test but members of the team and local supporters believe Maxwell can be trimmed here Thursday.

The local team is in good condition with the exception of Wooster, who suffered a broken nose two Sundays ago. Wooster however has about recovered and will be in the big game. The two teams are about evenly matched as far as weight is concerned and some real foot ball can be expected. In the Newcastle lineup will be seen two men well known in Rushville. They are Stiers and Stough. Stiers is playing in the line and Stough is the quarter back. Stiers is well known here as a foot ball player and is one of the best ever turned out of the local high school. Stough is fast and is considered a good field general. The game will be called at 2:30 o'clock. The two teams will line up as follows:

SEEKS TO ANNULL ROAD CONTRACT

posal of Wilk & Co. for the construction of said improvement is less than the estimated cost of the same as found by the engineer and viewers, and is the lowest and best bid therefor, and that said Wilk & Co., is the lowest and best responsible bidder therefor."

The record is typewritten. The last "and best" in the above record is an interlineation with pen and ink. Jesse M. Stone, county auditor, testified the interlineation was made by him, and that he suggested it be done. He denied that the commissioners had asked that the two words be inserted.

Mrs. Fanny Study testified that she made the record, and that it was handed to her by the county attorney who wrote the decree.

Jack Ross, attorney for Emsweller, testified that he was present when the commissioners first read the estimates, and that they retired to another room which was private. He said soon the county attorney handed his client's (Emsweller's) bond to him.

Mr. Ross continued that he followed the county attorney into the private room and found Mr. Wilk in there with the commissioners. He said he demanded to know why his client had not received the contract when he had made the lowest estimate.

Joe Brown, the plaintiff, testified he swore to the complaint in the cause before a squire he had never seen before. He said he supposed the attorneys in the case were employed for him. It was brought out that the plaintiff had seen Emsweller only once before he signed the complaint. He was not sure he had talked with Emsweller on that day. He denied Emsweller had agreed to remunerate him for any losses he might suffer in the case.

Brown testified he did not know of his own knowledge of any of the allegations of the complaint. He was put on the stand by the defendants. On cross-examination he asserted that he had no knowledge of the conditions surrounding the awarding of the Apple road contract, other than that Emsweller had told him his bid was the lowest.

Phil Wilk testified he had been in the contract business since 1889 and that he had been building roads for ten years. He said he had $10,000 invested in equipment for contract work.

Mr. Wilk denied in direct examination that the county attorney had acted in the capacity of attorney for him in this case or in any other, with two exceptions, and they were not cases in commissioner's court. He testified that the county attorney representing the bonding house from which he had been procuring bonds for the last four or five years. He testified that he prepared his own estimate on the Apple road.

Mr. Wilk told of incidents in the auditor's office the day the contract was let, which were in substance the same as those told by Mr. Hume. He said that Merrill Ball, a member of the board, came to the door leading into the private room, and announced the results of the conference, and he was called into the room to sign the contract.

Mr. Wilk denied that he had talked with the county attorney concerning this road contract and that he had been in the county attorney's office the morning or afternoon of the day the contract was let. He also denied, in answer to questions, that he had talked with the commissioners about this road contract or any other on which he had bid.

SEEKS TO ANNUL
ROAD CONTRACTSuit of Joe Brown Against Commissioners And Wilk & Co., Heard
in Court Today.

SIMILAR ACTION DISMISSED

William Emsweller Demands $40,000
Job Because he is Low Bidder
Argument Begun.

The case of Joe Brown, taxpayer of Orange township, against the county board of commissioners and Wilk & Company, road builders, in which it is sought to annul the contract for the Norman Apple highway in Orange township which was awarded to Wilk & Company for $45,789, September 25, of this year, because William Emsweller was the low bidder, was heard by Judge Blair in circuit court today.

A similar suit was brought by Emsweller, the low bidder, shortly after the contract was let, but it was found that the case had to be filed by a taxpayer of the township, which resulted in Brown bringing the present action. A restraining order was issued in the first case and later dissolved. This morning it was dismissed and the costs paid before the second case was started.

The evidence was concluded at 2:15 this afternoon and the argument was opened by John A. Tinsworth, attorney for the plaintiff, who was followed by Donald Smith, attorney for Wilk & Co. A. J. Ross of Anderson, Emsweller's counsel, was next and Attorney Raymond Springer of Connersville, of the defendant's counsel, was next. Gates Sexton, closed the argument for the complainant.

T. J. Hume was the first member of the board of commissioners to be placed on the witness stand. He testified that, after the time limit for bids being received on the day of the contract letting, the three estimates offered in the Apple highway matter, were opened and read in the presence of the bidders and a number of other people, and that the commissioners, which is in accordance with their usual custom, retired to a room to deliberate before awarding the contract. He said they were accompanied by the county attorney and the deputy auditor.

Mr. Hume testified Phil Wilk of Wilk & Co., was called into the room after it was decided to give his concern the contract. He said that he had never been approached either by Wilk or by the county attorney, John H. Kiplinger, in regard to the contract of the Norman Apple road or any other highway. That he had been one of the allegations of the complaint.

The names of the taxpayers of Orange township who petitioned the commissioners to give the contract to Wilk & Co., for which reason they did, were read in evidence. Attorneys for the plaintiff, in cross-examining Mr. Hume, dwelt considerably on the "custom" of the board and then asked if it were the custom for the board to give contracts to the highest bidder, Mr. Hume said it was not.

William Emsweller, the low bidder, testified he was formerly in the road contracting business but that he had sold his outfit. He declared, however, that he had prepared to purchase a stone crushing outfit and an engine in case he got the Apple road contract.

Attorneys for the plaintiff sought to prove the words "and best" had been inserted in the record of the letting of the contract at the behest of the commissioners. The record reads: "It is now found by the board of commissioners that the sealed pro-

Secretary to Address Meet.

WERE IN SESSION YESTERDAY

Representatives of various charity organizations met yesterday afternoon in the rest room of the public library and discussed plans looking toward the federation of the charities of Rushville into a more co-ordinate body.

It was deemed a wise plan some time ago for the associations and forces given to charity in Rushville to co-operate and thus get better results and at the same time do away with a good deal of wasteful giving. It was the consensus of the meeting that all of the money given for Thanksgiving should go through the channels of the federated charities so that the giving could be systematized. This will not interfere with the donation of food, however, for thanksgiving dinner.

An effort will be made to persuade C. S. Grout, secretary of the Charity Organization Society of Indianapolis to come here and speak to the federated charities. No other meeting will be held until he can come and deliver an address. Announcement will be made of the date of his coming.

Finly H. Gray, who was re-elected to congress on November 5, is now engaged in settling one of the most troublesome problems of his congressional career—that of determining upon who shall be recommended for postoffice appointments in the Sixth district, says the Newcastle Courier. Congressman Gray took up the matter in Henry county and at a meeting Monday afternoon with prominent Democrats and applicants for appointments, as postmaster in Henry county, outlined his position and plans.

At the meeting were Douglas Bolser, Ed Smith, Loring Bundy and T. B. Hunt, Newcastle applicants; Charles Clark, the Knightstown candidate, and Charles Casey, who desires to be postmaster at Shirley. The meeting was held in the office of Strod Hays in the Mouch building and was participated in the Democrats other than those seeking office.

Congressman Gray stated that he desired each applicant for office to fill out a special application blank prepared by him. The blank stated that each man if he secured the office would devote his entire time to its duties and would engage in no other business. It also sets forth that each applicant who failed to secure the recommendation would abide by the result without complaint and without a display of soreness or disappointment.

The application plan met with the approval of every aspirant present at the meeting and all signed them. The plan was also approved by leading Democrats, who urged the congressman to announce his recommendations early, in order that the sore spots that might result could be healed. Speeches of that variety were made by Horace G. Yergin and W. S. Chambers.

A similar plan will be carried out in every county in the district by Congressman Gray. Henry is the first one tried and it is expected that he will take the matter up at once and announce the names of the men that he is to recommend for appointment.

Disaster Being Made by Two
Commissioners.

GRAND JURY IS ON JOB ALSO

Hears Testimony of P. J. Hines, Conductor on Freight. Willis York
Up Today.

The joint investigation of the C. H. & D. wreck at Irvington a few weeks ago, which was begun yesterday by the Railroad Commission of Indiana and the Interstate Commerce Commission in Indianapolis, will probably be concluded by late this evening or tomorrow morning. The Marion county grand jury also began a probe of the disaster in Indianapolis yesterday.

The hearing is conducted behind closed doors and the testimony is not disclosed. Those who gave testimony were J. C. Skillman, J. P. Limbaugh, brakeman; E. W. Hoffman, trainmaster of the Indianapolis division of the C. H. & D. Railroad; H. B. Voorhees, general superintendent of transportation of the Cincinnati division of the C. H. & D.; Frank Conner, chief train dispatcher, and Thomas C. Casey, engineer.

Officials of the C. H. & D. road asked that they be allowed to be present at the investigation, but their request was denied.

Representatives of the government, co-operating with the Railroad Commission, are H. W. Belknap, chief inspector of safety appliances of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and J. J. Coutts and F. C. Smith, inspectors. David T. Matthews, an inspector for the Indiana commission, is also attending the hearing.

The grand jury heard the testimony of Patrick J. Hines, conductor on the freight train; Ernest Cox and Willis York, members of the freight train crew, who were subpoenaed for yesterday, were told to return today, as they could not be heard before the time set for them to appear before the Railroad Commission.

NEWMAN BOY JOINS NAVY

Young Man Implicated in Bicycle
Robbery Leaves City.

Donald Newman, who the police claim, aided Fred Hatfield in stealing a bicycle belonging to Frank Muire, has escaped arrest by enlisting in the navy. With Hatfield's arrest, young Newman took the tip and left for Indianapolis where it is understood he joined the navy. The bicycle was stolen Friday night but was recovered Saturday and the police have reason to believe that the Hatfield boy and Donald Newman stole the wheel. The Hatfield boy is in jail awaiting trial in the circuit court. The police made several efforts to locate Newman but were unsuccessful. The boy's mother informed policeman Wolter last evening that he had gone to Indianapolis with the intentions of enlisting.

WHOLE FAMILY MAY ATTEND PURDUEShort Course in January Will Interest Farmers, and Their Wives,
Sons and Daughters.

TO STUDY IN PRACTICAL WAY

Indiana farmers are looking forward with pleasure to the Purdue Farmers' Short Course, to be held January 13-18, 1913.

In this Course, more than 100 men and women have been enrolled each year. They come to study in a practical way, the subjects of Soils, Crops, Live Stock, Horticulture, Dairying, Poultry and Domestic Science. While these people spent a great share of the time in the lecture halls and laboratories, yet the inspiration and knowledge gained from association with one another is a great factor and means much in bringing these people back, year after year.

The program for the next Course has been prepared and is one of the strongest ever offered. Farmers and their wives, sons and daughters, and others interested in Agriculture and the country home, should plan to spend the week of January 13-13 at Purdue.

A change has been made in the plans for the customary union Thanksgiving services Thursday morning. C. M. Yocum of the Christian church as first planned.

The closing among the business houses will be general for the greater part of Thanksgiving Day. Most of the merchants will close all afternoon, and some all day. The banks, saloons, elevators and blacksmith shops will be shut all day. The postoffices will be closed at ten o'clock in the morning. One delivery will be made in the city and no delivery will be made on the rural routes.

RABBITS ARE VERY SCARCE THIS YEARZero Weather And Heavy Snows of Last Winter is Cause of Present Famine.

HUNTERS ARE COMPLAINING

Only Pleasure in Winter Sport, They Say, is Exercise From Walking.

Deep snows and continuous zero weather of last winter has made havoc of the rabbits in Rush county and just now it would be a difficult task for one to buy a sufficient number of them in this city for a square meal for an ordinary family.

There is a real and well understood reason why local hunters scour the fields all day and come home empty handed. There is practically no game. At one grocery in this city inquiry developed the fact that not a single rabbit had been offered for sale this year. If this grocery had a supply on hand the retail price probably would be fixed at 20 cents. This is 10 cents higher than the prevailing price last year when rabbits were plentiful.

Then dressed rabbits sold for as low as 10 cents each and every grocer had enough to supply all demands. Rabbits with their clothes on sold last year for even less than a dime each. This year the few that will be offered for sale will remain high, either dressed or undressed.

Practically every hunter who goes afield declares the game crop is the shortest he ever saw. Places where rabbits used to sit and tarry long to be shot may now be connected with a fine tooth comb and not even a rabbit track seen. The extreme cold weather last winter and the length of time snow remained on the ground is given as the reason for the shortage in rabbits.

When the hunting season opened, pessimistic reports began to filter in from local hunters, but the public generally thought they did not go to the right place and that big hunting tales would soon begin to be told. However, day after day goes by and the hunters come home empty handed or else with, perhaps, one skinny rabbit and two or three quail. They all declare the game is not here to be found and they must be right about it.

Among the causes assigned for the scarcity of rabbits is the cold weather and deep snows of last winter. Temperatures that range from zero down to 20 degrees below continuously for weeks are more than the native rabbit can endure. During such weather food is scarce and hard to get and rabbits perish from starvation.

Deep snows also are hard on rabbits. They can not get about to search for food and soon succumb to hunger and the cold. Cold weather and snows are also hard on quail and for the same reasons birds are scarce this season.

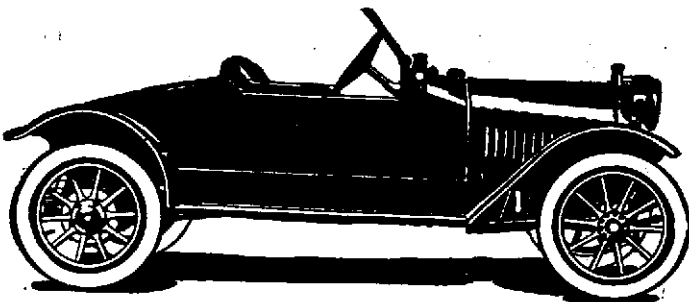

GAS WELL "SHOT."

A gas well was "shot" on the farm of Edward ("Ted") Evans, of near Gwynneville, this afternoon, and a big flow of gas was found. Several excellent wells have been drilled in that neighborhood recently and the residents of Gwynneville and the surrounding community bid fair to have plenty of gas this winter.

RECORD IN CORN CRIBBING MADE

More Corn Put up Last Week Than in Any Six Consecutive Days in Recent Years.

IT'S BIGGER THAN EXPECTED

It is said by farmers, such few as can be seen now, that probably more corn was cribbed in Rush county last week than ever was cribbed before in any six consecutive days in Rush county. Finer weather for this work could hardly be imagined. Every team and wagon and every available hand was pressed into the service, with the result that thousands upon thousands of bushels of the grain have gone safely into cribs and pens.

As the farmers proceed with the crop their first impressions as to its size and soundness have changed little. If anything they have been pleasantly surprised to find it a little bigger and better than they expected. Considerable more than half, though less, perhaps, than two-thirds of the crop is in. The rest, for the most part, will not worry its owners much, whatever sort of weather comes, for it can be husked as occasion offers, and, in case of continued bad weather, could, in many instances, be utilized in other ways besides husking.

"Tells the whole story."

To say that Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is best for children and grown persons and contains no opiates tells only part of the tale. The whole story is that it is the best medicine for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis and other affections of the throat, chest and lungs. Stops la-grippe coughs and has a healing and soothing effect. Remember the name, Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, accept no substitutes.

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

RUBBING IT IN.

(Knox Republican.)

If there is anything on earth that gives us a longing for eternal rest and deep, lamp solitude, it is a man who comes to a town or county, builds up a high a big paying business, grows rich and then squats down on the gold like a door knob, and is too stingy even to let the gravel grind in his own gizzard. A real, genuine 18-karat, stingy selfish man can't be honest, and if he ever gets to heaven and has wings he will fold them up and walk for fear he will ruffle a plume or lose a tail feather. The kind of men who build up a town and county and enjoy life and make the best citizens, and are enterprising, energetic and liberal men, who believe in living and letting others live, do not, when they get a dollar, squeeze it till the Goddess of Liberty feels like she had on a corset. Such squeezing is what causes hard times and stops the circulation of the American eagle. If it were not for the broadgauged, enterprising men, it would be impossible to build up a prosperous city.

Slot Machines Gathered Up and Carted Away.

Hammond, Ind., Nov. 26.—Representing themselves to be deputy sheriffs from Hammond, two unidentified men committed one of the boldest robberies ever reported in the Calumet region at Schneider. With a large automobile van they went from saloon to saloon and to every business place having a slot machine, quickly flashed stars and took the machines and contents to the auto.

The coolness with which the men worked convinced business men they had a right to confiscate the property. Money machines, candy, gum, cigar and all kinds of slot machines found in a wide-open town were collected until the auto van was filled. Then the robbers drove out of town at full speed. It is believed they obtained more than $1,000. As some of the machines were gambling devices, the owners have no recourse, even if the men are captured.

ALLIES GIVE THE WORLD A LESSON

Secrecy and Completeness of the Mobilization Unprecedented.

Views of Gen. Allison, U. S. A.

Bigger Force Than Turkey's—Bulgaria's Fighting Machine Built Up in Eight Years—Artillery a Strong Factor in the Triumph of the Allies.

In the Journal of the Military Service Institution of the United States, published on Governors island by officers of the army, a leading article deals with the military organizations of Bulgaria, Servia, Greece, Montenegro and Turkey. The author is Brigadier General John N. Allison.

"Once again," writes General Allison, "the eyes of the civilized world are turned anxiously toward the sick man of southeastern Europe, who is surely and sorely in need of the services of a physician."

General Allison takes up in order the armies of the contending nations, beginning with Turkey. The Turks, according to General Allison's figures, assume to have an infantry total of 37,000 officers and 1,222,000 enlisted men, a cavalry strength of 1,580 officers and 26,500 enlisted men, an artillery strength of 1,032 officers and 29,380 men and 245 officers and 10,470 enlisted men in the engineer corps, besides a medical corps and a transportation department.

"How much of this vast paper force actually exists," General Allison writes, "what proportion of that actually existing can be made available for work in the Balkans, is a matter of pure conjecture. Colonel Brose, late of the information department of the German general staff, estimates such number as 600,000 men of all arms, and this estimate is liberal."

War Strength of Allies.

The war strength of the allies General Allison places at 680,000 men, of whom Bulgaria furnishes 350,000, Servia 190,000, Greece 100,000 and Montenegro 50,000.

Writing of the Bulgarian army, General Allison points out that the present great fighting machine was organized less than eight years ago. The organization is divided into four parts—the field or active army, the active army reserve, the reserve army and the militia. Prior to the present war the Bulgarian army was distributed in nine divisions, each with a headquarters, and these areas knew exactly how many men of all arms could be called upon in the event of war. The divisions were subdivided into districts, and from each district the organization was such as to produce at the earliest possible moment one fully equipped regiment of four battalions.

The Servian army is singled out for praise by the army officer, as are also the fighting forces of Greece and Montenegro. General Allison calls the Montenegrins an intrepid race of sharpshooters, with an organization so perfect that it can be concentrated within a few days, the army being accompanied, when it is in the field, by the wives and daughters of the soldiers, who carry the ammunition and cook all of the food.

The Greek army, General Allison points out, has learned the lesson of its defeat by Turkey in 1897, and since that time far-reaching administrative changes and disciplinary reforms have been adopted, and the present Greek force is the outgrowth of that transition.

Artillery's Part.

Reports from the seat of war agree on the important part that the artillery has played in the present war. General Allison gives much space to this arm of the service and shows what each of the allied states, as well as Turkey, has in the way of big guns. The Turkish artillery comprises field, horse, mountain artillery and howitzer batteries, fortress artillery and artillery depots. All of the organizations are part of the Turkish regular army, and there is no second line of artillery. On a war footing each field battery has 4 officers and 100 to 120 enlisted men.

The latest available reports give the total Turkish artillery strength as 199 field batteries (1,188 guns), eighteen horse batteries (108 guns), forty mountain batteries (240 guns) and twelve howitzer batteries (72 guns). These guns are all of the various Krupp types. The artillery ammunition train consists of 1,254 wagons.

The Bulgarian artillery numbers about 13,000 officers and men. The artillery consists mainly of 8.7 and 7.5 centimeter Krupp guns, 6.5 centimeter Krupp mountain pieces, Krupp 12 centimeter and Schneider howitzers, Creuzot siege guns and 7.5 centimeter Creuzot quick firers. The number of guns is 1,154.

The Servian artillery comprises only Schneider-Canet quick firing guns, while the Montenegrin artillery consists of eighteen siege, twenty-five field and thirty-eight mountain guns, four howitzers, fifteen mortars and eighteen Gatling and Maxim-Nordenföld machine guns.

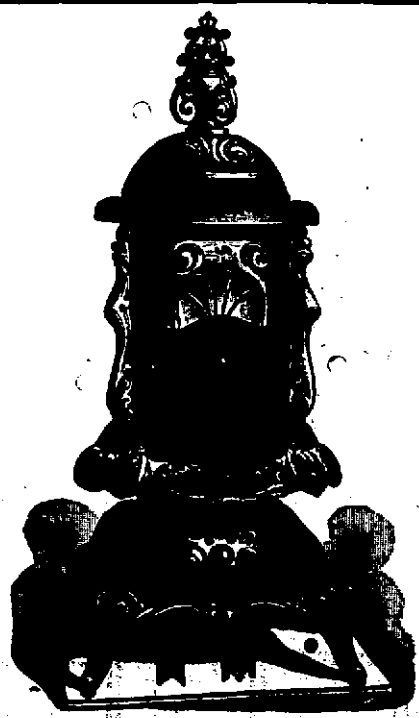

The Greek artillery consists of thirty-six batteries of 7.5 centimeter Schneider-Canet, three heavy and six mountain batteries of six guns each, 7.5 centimeter special barrel. The heavy guns are of 17, 15 and 13.5 centimeters, with two batteries of howitzers.

Progressive Farming.

During the past few years greater strides have been taken in the direction of progressive farming than ever before. There are two reasons why this advancement has been made. First, the farmer himself realizes that the soil can be more profitable by proper care and intelligent management and, secondly, the rapidly increasing population of the country demands that larger crops be raised in order to supply the one hundred millions of people who now live in the United States.

The position of the farmer in this country is a peculiarly important one. Upon him depends almost entirely the supply of many of the necessary foods. The man in the city who is unacquainted with farm life buys a sack of flour or a bag of corn meal and little realize the work, care and attention given the fields in order that his wants might be supplied. On the other hand the farmer is in a measure dependent upon the city merchant for it is to him that the farm products are sold. The merchant also supplies the farmer with the necessary articles which can not be supplied on the farm. These conditions make these classes mutually dependent and for this reason they should work together and the greatest harmony should prevail.

By various experiments during the past half decade, it has been shown conclusively that the greatest value is not being obtained from the soil. Statistics show that the corn crop this year amounted to 3,169,000,000 bushels valued at $1,850,000,000. This is an average of only thirty bushels to the acre. In experimental fields, however, it has been shown that the ground is capable of producing a hundred bushels to the acre where the proper care is given to the selection of seed, plowing, fertilizing and cultivation. During the past few years hundreds of acres of ground in our own country have been made to produce larger and better crops by proper fertilization, which costs but a comparative small sum in the first instance but results in larger returns to the land owner.

The short course, such as will be conducted in Cambridge City will aid materially in bringing about the desired results. The lectures and demonstrations are given by instructors who have gone over the ground thoroughly and after years of close study are prepared to impart their knowledge to the farmer. Doubtless many suggestions can be obtained from the short course lectures which are the result of years of study, and which if properly applied can be adopted at once in practical agriculture resulting in larger crops and a general improvement of rural conditions.

The national government and state has been aiding the farmer in every way they can. When it was found that some conditions could be bettered, steps have been taken to bring about the improvement and expense has not been considered. A great opportunity is knocking at the door of the farmer, but the sole responsibility rests with him whether the offer is accepted or rejected. Many of the farmers are awakened to the situation and have not only grasped this opportunity but are using their influence to interest others. With the various agencies which are now at work it is a safe prediction that greater progress will be made during the next five years than has ever been recorded in the same period of time.

Mr. Bryan suggests that ex-presidents should have oratorical privileges on the floor of Congress. That would have suited Andrew Johnson. As it was, he returned to the Senate where debate is unlimited.

As the Democratic platform declares protection to be unconstitutional this question of organic law will become acute at the extra session unless the Democrats forget it completely.

Here's Where the Fun Comes In

WHAT WAS THE MATTER?

An election story which concerns John F. Moses is just now being told though it is several days since the election.

Being a rather ardent Republican Mr. Moses arose from bed about two o'clock on the morning after the election and called Republican headquarters to get some of the returns. He got nothing but the busy buzz and called Democratic headquarters. Sam Trabue, Democratic chairman, answered the telephone.

"How does it look for Rush county?" queried Mr. Moses.

"It looks like we had carried it by about five hundred," declared Mr. Trabue enthusiastically.

"How about the State?"

"Ralston carried it by at least a hundred thousand."

"And the United States?"

"A dispatch received from the New York Herald just now states that Wilson carried every State but two. 'What was the matter with them?' asked Mr. Moses and hung up the receiver.

Two men were fined in police court this morning by Mayor Black on the charge of public intoxication. They were Bernhardt Gabael and Frank Casey, colored. Both went to jail for eleven days. Gabael stated that he came here from Oxford, Ohio, and Casey is a well-known colored character here.

The Pythian Sisters will meet tomorrow night in the K. of P. hall for practice. A large attendance is desired.

Youthful Knightstown Girl Swears Maggie Falcon Gave Her Beer in Newcastle.

LATTER FINED $25 AND COSTS

Bertha Lawson Says Attempt Was Made to Induce Her to go With Colored Men.

The giving of a bottle of beer by Mrs. Maggie Pressley Falcon, the Greenfield woman, who was arrested in Newcastle last Wednesday night with Bertha Lawson, a nineteen-year-old girl and Aaron and Ben Bailey, colored proved a rather costly operation, as the woman was fined $25 and costs, amounting in all to $35, at the session of the police court Monday says the Newcastle Courier. She could not pay the assessment and went to jail.

The case was up Saturday morning before Mayor Barnard and was continued until this morning so that the evidence of the Bailey brothers could be secured. The accused woman in the hearing Saturday denied giving the beer to the girl and said that it was given by Aaron Bailey. The Bailey brothers denied the accusation Monday and were supported by an affidavit by the Lawson girl, which was offered in evidence.

The affidavit is regarded by the police as an arraignment of the Falcon woman on a serious charge. It shows that she persuaded the Lawson girl to come to this city. The document reads as follows:

"State of Indiana, County of Henry, ss:

"Bertha Lawson, being first duly sworn, says that she will be 19 years of age in December, 1912, and that her home is at Vanceburg, Ky. That she is employed in a laundry at Knightstown, Indiana. That on the 17th day of November, 1912, Maggie Pressley Falcon came after her and took her a ride in a buggy and then coaxed her to go to Greenfield, Ind.

"That she stayed at the home of Maggie Pressley Falcon, and who is married to an Italian, at Greenfield, until the twentieth day of November, when said Falcon woman persuaded her to go to Newcastle, Ind.

"That when they arrived at Newcastle, Indiana, the Falcon woman hunted up Tip Hairston, a colored man, and got him to go after some beer for her. That said Hairston and the Falcon woman went down the street together, and returned in a short time with some beer in bottles. That the Falcon woman gave this affiant, the said Bertha Lawson, one bottle of the said beer. That Aaron Bailey was present at the time the Falcon woman handed the said bottle of beer to this affiant.

"That this affiant drank the said bottle of beer and became partly intoxicated therefrom.

"That the Falcon woman told her that these colored men were friends of hers and that she wanted her to go with one of them and that this affiant refused. Then the said Falcon woman told affiant that she was up here with her and could not get home without she showed her the way and she would have to go with the colored man. Then the police arrested them and they were taken to police headquarters.

"She says that she was afterwards arrested at Knightstown. Further affiant saith not.

"BERTHA LAWSON.

"Subscribed and sworn to before me this 25th day of November, 1912.

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

RESPONSIBILITY.

(Columbus Republican.)

The Indianapolis Star, a paper explosively and always abusively progressive—that is to say, anti-everything but Rooseveltism, in order to have one more excuse to lambast republicans who stayed with the party during the late unpleasantness, imagines it hears rumors of "commercial hesitation and retrenchment," which, if a fact and interpreted as the Star would have it, pressages business depression and ultimately panic conditions throughout the country. The Star hopes that the scarecrow about tariff revision hurting prosperity has been worn so threadbare as to frighten nobody. So does The Republican hope so, but if true that the mere threat of tariff revision as indicated by the Star—the first newspaper to do so, so far as observed—causes rumors of "commercial hesitation and retrenchment," what will be the affect on the industrial interests of the country when a democratic congress assembles in extraordinary session next April, upon the call of a democratic president, for the express purpose of tinkering with the tariff?

But this is not what we started out to say. The Star blames the whole situation upon the republican voters—the ones who voted for Taft because he was the nominee of their party, and the others who voted for Wilson as a protest against Rooseveltism. According to the Star, had those republicans who voted for Wilson cast their votes for Roosevelt, he, instead of Wilson, would have been elected, and all this tariff agitation would have been avoided, because says the Star, the progressive party is pledged to protection. So, indeed, is the republican party pledged to protection, and its pledges in that direction, have been redeemed time after time as is evidenced by the remarkable and unprecedented prosperity that is now menaced by the threat of democratic tariff tinkering.

According to The Republican's way of thinking republicans who voted for Wilson are not responsible for the condition that confronts us. The number of such delinquent republicans was not great even if the Star does insist they were numerous enough to bring about Wilson's election and Roosevelt's defeat. The Republican's facilities for making such guess are equal to the Star's, who's assertion that they are chargeable with such dire results is likewise guesswork. All know that the split in the republican party engineered by Roosevelt and fostered by such agencies as the Star, was responsible for the election of Wilson and should commercial disaster result from tariff agitation the people will know exactly where to place the blame.

The Star abhors republicans who voted for Wilson in preference to Roosevelt, if there were any such, as well as those who voted for Taft in preference to Roosevelt, but glorifies those who bolted their party and its nominee to vote for Roosevelt. In a nut shell this is the Star's religion and it decrees that those who believe or contend otherwise should be cast into the outer darkness.

If the Star was ever a genuine republican paper its readers might give serious consideration to what it has to say on political questions, especially as between republicans and bull moosers, but its measure has been taken and it don't cut much ice.

The state of Indiana by John W. Hannan, Joseph L. Kempton and Clara J. Kempton, husband and wife, says the Richmond Palladium.

The complaint asks that the court order the land condemned and appoint appraisers to fix the value of it. The land in question comprises two farms in Center township, one of 110 acres and the other of 40 acres, which the institution desires for colonization purposes.

That the board of trustees has determined that the institution must have this ground and that the trustees have attempted to purchase it, is alleged in the complaint. The plaintiffs assert that they have offered a reasonable price for the land but that the defendants refuse to sell.

The State school authorities are continuing its fight against cigarettes and is asking the aid of the teachers and parents throughout the state to assist in the battle.

A rigid investigation by school authorities disclosed the astounding evidence that a large number of the boys attending public schools were confirmed cigarette smokers or indulged in the practice. The effect, on the boy is noticeably due to his inefficiency in school work. A confirmed smoker is dull in his studies, makes poor grades and exhibits little or no ambition.

WILL GET CHECKS FROM WASHINGTON

Old Soldiers Will Receive Next Quarterly Pension Vouchers Direct From Headquarters.

AND NOT THROUGH AGENCY

The Rush county and Rushville veterans of the Civil and subsequent wars will receive their next quarterly checks or vouchers direct from Washington instead of from the Indianapolis agency, as heretofore. The checks can be cashed at any bank like an ordinary check. They must, however, be endorsed by the pensioner and two witnesses, to whom the pensioner must show that he is the rightful owner of the check, and that his certificate number is the same as the number on the check. No further red tape is necessary. The new plan of paying pensions takes the work entirely out of the hands of pension agents who formerly executed the vouchers received by the soldiers. The vouchers were then sent back and at the next quarter a check for the voucher already executed and another unexecuted voucher for the next pension day were sent to the pensioners.

The new method will also save the pensioner trouble, as all he will be forced to do will be to go to the bank with his check and certificate, endorse his check and have two witnesses do the same. Under the old method a trip to the pension agent was necessary.

Pensions will be sent to the last known address. If a pensioner changes his address he should notify Washington, giving his former address and his new one. Otherwise his pension will be sent to the old address.

AMUSEMENTS

"When Father Had His Way" is the title of a Lubin drama, the first picture at the Princess tonight. Orma Hawley is featured and the picture is said to be very good. "The Desperado" is a Pathe western drama. Tomorrow night a Biograph feature "Two Daughters of Eve" with Henry Walthall in the leading role, will be shown. A matinee will be given Thursday.

"The Senator Keeps House," with William H. Crane in the leading role, comes to English's in Indianapolis as the Thanksgiving day attraction. The engagement begins with a special matinee performance Thursday and continues the remainder of the week, with a second matinee Saturday. The comedy, and it concerns the attempt of a senator—as the title suggests—to keep house. He fails, and a woman comes to his rescue to straighten out affairs and put things in order. A current of politics mixes itself with the romance of the piece, and the two combined afford Mr. Crane excellent opportunity to display his own peculiar ability. It is interesting to note that this is Mr. Crane's fiftieth season on the stage.

Henry Heckman will move soon to his new property bought of Tom Sullivan in Brookside.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Parting of the Ways.

THE two weeks which followed the Bivens ball were the happiest Harriet Woodman had known since Nan's shadow had fallen across her life. Every moment was crowded with the work of preparing for her trip, except the hours she could not refuse Stuart, who had suddenly waked to the fact that something beautiful was going out of his life.

Harriet watched him with keen joy and deep in her heart a secret hope began to grow slowly.

The day she sailed he refused to go with her to the pier.

"Why, Jim, you must come with me!" she protested.

"No, I can't, little pal. Goodbye."

He watched the cab roll down Fourth street toward the pier while a great wave of loneliness overwhelmed him.

At night the doctor was not at home. Stuart rapped on his door next morning and got no answer. The girl said he had spent the night out—he didn't know where.

As Stuart was about to leave for his office the doctor entered. His bloodshot eyes were sunken deep behind his brows, his face haggard and his shoulders drooped. Stuart knew he had tramped the streets all night in a stupor of hopeless misery.

Stuart took his outstretched hand and led him into the library. "I know why you tramped the streets; the old house is very lonely."

"I never knew what loneliness meant before!" The big hand fell in a gesture of despair.

Stuart pressed his hand. "I understand. I'm younger than you, doctor, but I, too, have walked that way alone. You're all in; you must go to bed and sleep."

When Stuart returned early from his work in the afternoon he found a group of forlorn women and children standing beside the stoop. A pale, elfish looking boy of ten, whose face appeared to be five years older, sat on the lower step crying.

"What's the matter, kiddie?" he asked kindly.

"I wants de doctor—me mudder's sick. She'll croak before mornin' ef he don't come—day all wants him." He waved his dirty little hand toward the others. "He ain't come around no more for a week. The goll says we can't see him—he's asteen."

"I'll tell him you're here. The doctor's been ill himself."

He urged the doctor to go at once to see his patients. The work he loved would restore his spirits. He was dumfounded at the answer he received.

"No, no! I'm in no mood to work. I couldn't help them. I'd poison and kill them all, feeling as I do today. A physician can't heal the sick unless there's healing in his own soul. I'd bring death, not life, into their homes. Tell them to go away!"

Stuart emptied his pockets of all the money he had in a desperate effort to break their disappointment.

"The doctor's too ill to see you now," he explained. "He sent this money for you and hopes it will help you over the worst until he can come."

He divided the money among them, and they looked at it with dull disappointment. They were glad to get it.

but what they needed more than money was the hope and strength of their friend's presence.

"Doctor," Stuart began gently, "I've known you for about fifteen years. You're the only father I've had in this big town, and you've been a good one. You've been acting strangely for the past two weeks. You're in trouble."

"The greatest trouble that can come to any human soul," was the bitter answer. "But," he paused, and his eyes stared at the ceiling as he groaned. "I've got to bear it. What's the use to whine?"

Stuart stepped close and slipped his arm about the stalwart figure. His voice was tender.

"Come, doctor; you're not fooling me. I've known you too long. There's only one man on earth for whom I'd do as much as I would for you—my own gray haired father down south. Come now; tell me what's the trouble?"

Stuart could feel the big form sway and tremble under the stress of overwhelming emotion, and his arm pressed a little closer. And then the tension suddenly broke.

"You—did—what?"

The doctor sank into a chair and looked up with a helpless stare.

"Yes, Jim, I will. I'll tell you." And he related his experiences in the Bivens mansion, ending with:

"I stole—a case of—jewels!"

Stuart sprang to his feet, with an exclamation of horror.

"You—did—what?"

"Yes," the doctor went on hoarsely. "I stole a case of his jewels and sent my girl abroad. I'm going to plead guilty now and go to prison. I shall never again lift my head in the haunts of men."

Stuart sobbed in anguish.

"You see, boy, I failed when put to the test. It doesn't make any difference about my reputation. Character only counts, and I'm a thief."

"Shut up!" Stuart cried fiercely, seizing his arm. "Don't say that again, and don't talk so loudly. Whatever you did you were insane when you did it."

"Maybe it was a mistake. I don't know. I couldn't think then. I only know now that life is impossible any more, and I'm ready to go. You can send me to prison at once, Jim. I'm glad you are the district attorney."

"But I'm not. I resigned my office this morning to go into business for myself. I had only another month to serve. You're not going to prison if I can help it."

"But I don't want you to help it. It's the only place to go now—you see, boy, I can't live with myself any more. Besides I'm old and played out; the world don't need me any longer."

"Well, I need you," Stuart broke in. "and you're not going to give up this fight as long as I'm here."

"I'm a failure; it's no use."

"But you've forgotten some things."

"The younger man said tenderly."

"You've helped to make my life what it is—you haven't failed in that. You gave your blood to your country when she needed it—you didn't fail in that. You have forgotten the thousands you have helped, the hope and cheer and inspiration that passed into their lives through yours. We'll go to Bivens' house tonight. We'll tell him the truth. We'll return the value of his jewels. I'll get the money to make good what you owe him"—His voice broke. "Oh, why, why, why didn't you let me know? I've influence with Bivens. He will drop the matter and no one on earth will know save we three."

"But you don't understand, Jim," the broken man protested, feebly. "I tell you I've given up. I can't take your money, I can't pay. I tell you I've given up. I can't take your money. I can't pay it back."

"You can pay it back, too. If you like, Harriet will be earning thousands of dollars in a few years. Her success is sure."

A faint smile lighted the father's face.

"Her success is sure. Isn't it?" he asked with the eagerness of a child. And then the smile slowly faded.

"But I shall not be here to see it."

"Yes, you will. I'm running your affairs now, and you've got to do what I say. Get ready. We are going to see Bivens."

Bivens refused point blank at first to see Woodman and ordered his servant to put him out of the house and ask Stuart to remain for a conference.

Stuart drew from his case a card and wrote a message to Nan:

Impetuous that I see Cal at once in the presence of my friend on a matter of grave importance. Please send him down. He is stubborn.

Bivens came in a few minutes, shook hands cordially with Stuart and ignored Woodman.

"I want to see you alone with the doctor," the young lawyer began, "where we cannot possibly be overheard."

"I have nothing to say to this man, but for your sake all right. Come up to the library."

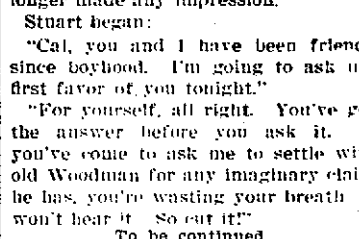

Once in the room and the door closed the doctor sank listlessly into a chair, seeing nothing, hearing nothing. His deep, sunken, bloodshot eyes were turned within. The outer world no longer made any impression.

Stuart began:

"Cal, you and I have been friends since boyhood. I'm going to ask you a favor of you tonight."

"For yourself, all right. You've got the answer before you ask it. If you've come to ask me to settle with old Woodman for any imaginary claim he has, you're wasting your breath. I won't hear it. So cut it!"

CONSPIRACY AND FELONY CHARGED

Distinguished Men Face Bar of Federal Court.

ECHO OF MINE PROMOTION DEAL

Among Those Charged With Using the Mails For the Purpose of Getting Money by Deception Are Julian Hawthorne, Josiah Quincy and Dr. William J. Morton, Son of Man Who Gave to World Beneficent Ether.

New York, Nov. 26.—After a day's sifting a jury has been made up for the trial of Julian Hawthorne, son of Nathaniel Hawthorne, and himself a writer of wide popularity; Josiah Quincy, twice mayor of Boston and assistant secretary of state under President Cleveland; Dr. William J. Morton, son of the physician who discovered how valuable ether is as an anesthetic, and Albert Freeman, who hitherto has achieved notoriety as a promoter of mining companies. There are three indictments against each of the defendants for conspiracy and one for a felony. The felony is based on the charge that they used the mails to get money under false pretenses, and the conspiracy consists in the charge that they used the mails fraudulently.

When the four defendants were called before Judge Hough in the United States district court, John McKinnon, who was secretary and treasurer of the mining companies with which the defendants were identified and who was indicted with them, was not lined up with them. This led to the report that he would be a witness against his former associates, but on this subject the United States district attorney, Mr. Wise, maintained a satisfied silence. It was noticeable that Mr. Hawthorne and Dr. Morton, both white haired and mustached, sat together during the proceedings, while Freeman and ex-Mayor Quincy offered advice in the selection of jurors, had their heads together a good part of the time.

It is the promotion and operation of the Temagami Cobalt mines, limited; Elk Lake Cobalt mines, limited; the Hawthorne Silver and Iron mines, limited, and the Montreal-James mines, limited, that the defendants are accused of having used the mails for fraudulent purposes.

The defense asked to have the indictments dismissed on the ground that the letters which were written by Mr. Hawthorne to college professors, professional and business men, exploiting the stock were in themselves harmless pieces of literature and did not constitute a crime. Judge Hough instructed the talesmen what they would have to determine was whether the promises and predictions made by Hawthorne and his associates were for the purposes of getting money by deception.

PEACEFUL COMPROMISE

A Promise of Better Things For the Dominican Republic Heard.

Washington, Nov. 26.—A compromise program has been agreed upon in the Dominican republic for the preservation of peace, according to word received at the state department, and the early return to the United States of the American commissioners is predicted.

The present administration in the Dominican republic will resign. Congress met in extra session today to elect a successor to Eladio Victoria, who now heads the Dominican government. This successor will probably be Archbishop Noel, who has been agreed on for the office of provisional president.

It is believed at the state department that the compromise agreed upon will result in many reforms in administration which will make possible the restoration of tranquility in the republic. It is proposed to install the provisional president not later than Dec. 1. He will probably hold office until the national elections can be held.

Made incendiary Statements.

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 26.—A threat to incite a Haymarket riot in this city, made while speaking to the employees of the La Tessa Knitting mills and the Mohawk Valley Cap factory, caused the arrest of W. E. Clark of Chicago, representative of the Industrial Workers of the World. He was ordered arrested after he had made a number of incendiary statements to the textile workers.

VINCENT ASTOR "BUSINESS MAN"

His $100,000,000 Inheritance Forces Him to Leave Harvard.

HOUSE'S YOUNGEST HEAD

Wealthiest Young Man in the World Was a Frail Baby Whose Life Was Saved by Unremitting Care—As a Lad His Life Was Twice Saved by Surgical Operations.

William Vincent Astor, who on his majority, Nov. 15, inherited about $100,000,000 and became the American head of the house of Astor, has had his college career terminated by the assumption of the responsibilities of such vast wealth. He is "going into business" with a fortune, having which 900 men out of a thousand would be well content to quit it.

The tragedy of the Titanic, which left him fatherless, at once foreshadowed his leaving Harvard, though the young man at the time expressed his intention of completing the course. No Astor ever succeeded to the headship at his age. His father was twenty-eight before he succeeded, and his grandfather was sixty. His great-grandfather, John Jacob 3d, was fifty-three, and his father, William Backhouse 1st, was fifty-six.

No such rugged physical figure as that which has just passed has entered upon this tremendous responsibility. Vincent Astor normally looks more boyish than he is. He has his father's height, but not his weight by forty pounds. He has not his breadth of shoulders by three inches, and the father's doggedness shows only in the son's chin. For the past three years father and son were almost inseparable companions.

Life Saved by Unremitting Care.

Vincent Astor was christened William Vincent. He was born in the old homestead at New York five months before his grandfather died and his father became head of the house. He was so frail a baby that only unremitting care kept him alive. He lived the loneliest of little boyhoods because of this, and when other children romped in the open air he sat over a toy piano in a nursery to which no playmates ever came. Servants saved him every exertion. Nurses were always with him. Physicians awaited calls to him that had precedence over all others.

When Vincent Astor was twelve Dr. William T. Bull saved him from death by appendicitis. In less than a year he was saved from death by another surgical operation, this time for a growth in the throat, following an attack of mumps. He was taken every year then to St. Moritz or the Riviera because of bronchial trouble, and his education was being directed by a tutor who lived with him in a house taken for his exclusive use at Tuxedo.

Six years of this unceasing attention brought Vincent Astor to a degree of health it had been thought he never could attain. Newport was astonished to see him come there five years ago and take an active part in the sports of the summer colony. It was still more astonished at the importance automobile had in his interests, for he drove his own car and drove it with daring skill, although he was only sixteen.

Didn't Stay Long at Eton.

Then Vincent Astor went to Eton, but soon returned—to be followed by strange tales of the amusement of the English public school at his manner of living. Friends of the boy said he had done nothing more than take an ample wardrobe with him, but the gossip was that he displayed his wealth in a dozen other ways.

St. George's at Newport, gave the boy the rest of the training he needed for admission to Harvard, where he began a three years' course last September.

Last fall it was said that Vincent Astor had entered Harvard "with the distinction of having more clothes than any man at the university."

ARBITRATION DECISION HAS BEEN ACCEPTED

There Will Be No Strike of Locomotive Engineers.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and the committee representing the fifty-two railroads interested in the decision just handed down by the board of arbitration, in a session behind closed doors in this city, decided that the decision shall be accepted. This means there will be no strike and that the agreement under which the locomotive engineers are working and which has only five more months to run, until May 1, 1913, will be lived up to by the engineers.

When asked what would be the attitude of the locomotive firemen and if the latter would make demands, Mr. Stone remarked that he could not speak for the firemen. It is believed, however, that the firemen will make no further demands.

INSANITY PLEA

This Will Be Set Up in Effort to Save Mrs. Maud Ping.

Bedford, Ind., Nov. 26.—The trial of Mrs. Maude Ping, charged with first degree murder for the killing of her husband, James Ping, whom she shot to death following a quarrel at the supper table, has begun in the Lawrence circuit court.

The tragedy occurred on the evening of April 25. James Ping, aged thirty-two, was seated at the supper table, with one of his small children on his knee. His young wife entered, pulled a revolver near his head and placed the trigger on his forehead, killing him instantly. Walking into her sleeping room and throwing herself on the bed, Mrs. Ping shot herself through the breast. The bullet missed her heart and after some weeks she recovered.

Mrs. Ping's defense is emotional insanity. She was Ping's second wife, and was only nineteen years old. A few weeks before the shooting she had lost a baby, and intense grief, her attorneys will contend, affected her mind. Furthermore, they will attempt to show that the couple's married life was unhappy, because of the girl's jealousy. They will try to prove the jealousy well founded.

AWAITING VERDICT

Jury Now Has the Case of Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso.

Salem, Mass., Nov. 26.—The fate of the three I. W. W. leaders, Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso, who were accused of being concerned in the killing of Anna Lopez during a strike riot at Lawrence on Jan. 29, now is in the hands of the jury.

Judge Quinn, in charging the jury, instructed that the evidence against Ettor and Giovannitti did not warrant a first degree verdict. If guilty, the verdict, he said, must be second degree murder. Caruso might be found guilty of first degree murder, but none of the defendants, under the form of indictment, could be adjudged guilty of manslaughter.

Train Crashed Into Handcar. Richmond, Ind., Nov. 26.—One man was killed and another injured when a handcar, on which a half dozen bridge carpenters were riding, was run down by a Chesapeake & Ohio passenger train south of Richmond.

Perry Shilts, twenty-one years old, living in Richmond, was hurled fifty feet and received injuries from which death resulted in a few minutes. Other members of the bridge crew escaped by jumping from the handcar.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 26.—Arthur Capper will be the next governor of Kansas. For some time after the election the question was in doubt, as the contest was close. Mr. Capper is the editor of the State Capital and several weekly publications.

MANY RUMORS REND EUROPE

Prospect of General War Is Disquieting.

CHANCELLORIES ARE SILENT

Little information of a definite character is permitted to issue from behind the doors of the various chancelleries of state where issues of world import are overshadowing all other subjects of discussion.

London, Nov. 26.—There is today throughout Europe, though in the chancelleries the diplomats talk hopefully of the eventual settlement of the Balkan difficulty without a general war, a general feeling of unrest that is not quieted by the refusal of the governments to give any hint to their peoples as to what is in the wind. It has been a day of rumors, of the telling of sinister stories and the prompt denial of the same.

Vienna hears that an Austrian consul has disappeared mysteriously. He was last heard of in a town captured by the Servians. Serbia has refused to define her attitude until she is done with the Turk. She is said to be fortifying Belgrade. On the heels of this report there comes a story that Austria was about to present an ultimatum to Serbia and would act independently of the other powers.

And while the troops are being mobilized throughout Europe and there is talk of war on all men's lips at the little village of Baghiche, near Biyuk-Cherkendye, the plenipotentiaries of Turkey and Bulgaria are discussing the preliminaries for the negotiations for an armistice.

They met on neutral ground. Beyond the general belief that the Bulgarians, exhausted by the war, are willing to modify their first demands rejected by Turkey, and the intimation that this was now going on, nothing about the conference was given out. An armistice of eight days is reported to have been arranged pending the outcome of these conferences, and during that time the two armies will hold the positions they now occupy along the Tchataldja lines.

The story of the disappearance of the Austrian consul at Pristina, Herr Prochaska, comes from the Vienna correspondent of the Daily Mail. He says that the dispute between Austria and Serbia has been very seriously aggravated by the rumors that the consul has been done away with. According to his dispatch Herr Edl, the Austrian emissary dispatched to get into communication with Herr Prochaska, arrived at Uskub on Saturday, expecting to go to Pristina. According to Herr Edl the Serbian authorities told him that as the railroad communication with Pristina had been interrupted, he could not go on. Whereupon he said that whether the communication was stopped or not he would go on. The correspondent adds that enigmatic behavior of Serbia complicates the situation dangerously, and that if King Peter pursues his course it is the feeling in Vienna that an ultimatum will be at once sent to Belgrade.

SHIFT OF FORCE

Allies Now Turning Their Forces Toward the Dardanelles.

Constantinople, Nov. 26.—It is reported here that the Bulgarians have withdrawn considerable forces from the Tchataldja lines, sending them to Adrianople and the Dardanelles. Vigorous action by a Greek and Bulgarian force against the Dardanelles is expected unless the armistice is promptly effected.

There is a divergence of opinion among the ambassadors of the powers here regarding the port's demand for the withdrawal of the foreign naval contingents. The Austrian and German envoys agree with the port's view that the presence of the marines is not needed, but the other members of the diplomatic corps consider their presence in Constantinople as still necessary.

Peace and tranquility now prevail around Tchataldja. The Turks are making the most of the respite to dig cover. They are in possession of the Hademken valley and have pushed their advanced posts to the hills on the western side of the valley near the village of Tchataldja. Many additional earthworks have been constructed. The Turks are in a very strong position and full of hope. It would certainly be a costly undertaking for the allies to force the splendid defensive position. Nothing is known regarding the negotiations for an armistice beyond the fact that the meeting place has been chosen.

A Verdict Is In Doubt.

Goshen, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The trial jury of Burton W. Gibson, accused of murdering Mrs. Szabo, after being out eight hours, announced that it could not agree and asked that Justice Tompkins be notified. It was said that the jury stood 9 to 3 for conviction. Judge Tompkins ordered the jury to go back and make another attempt to agree.

FATAL EXPLOSION IN A DRY STARCH HOUSE

Dust Lets Go and Many Are Killed at Waukegan.

Waukegan, Wis., Nov. 26.—In an explosion in the dry starch house of the Corn Products company at this place, ten laborers were killed, a like number injured and five are missing. Immediately following the explosion the building, which was a three-story structure, took fire and burned to the ground, and it is believed by the police that some of the missing were cremated in the ruins. The injured were hurried to hospitals. Three of them are in a critical condition.

There were fifty-five employees in the building at the time of the explosion. All of them were known by number instead of by name, and because of this fact identification of some of the victims has not been established.

Most of the employees were at work on the ground floor and to this fact they owe their lives. The explosion was of such force that it shook the town and broke windows in stores and dwellings half a mile away, hurled the workmen against the side of the building and to the floor.

The work of rescuing those still alive began at once and the injured were rushed to hospitals.

HORRID DESIGN TOLD IN COURT

Dynamiters Planned to Destroy Los Angeles.

McMANIGAL CONCLUDES STORY

As a Climax to His Sensational Testimony in Federal Court, Government's Chief Witness Tells Jury That John McNamara Approached Him With a Proposition Literally to Wipe California City Off the Map.

Indianapolis, Nov. 26.—One of the stories that Ortle E. McManigal told on the witness stand in continuing his testimony in the dynamiting cases was how desperate John J. McNamara had become within a week of his arrest by the Burns detectives and to what lengths he proposed to go in carrying out the great dynamiting campaign of 1911.

For some reason J. J. McNamara felt a strong resentment against the city of Los Angeles, and he rarely spoke of it without an oath, said McManigal. He could not get over the feeling that there ought to be a larger program of destruction for that city, said witness. McManigal was around headquarters in April, 1907, and on the seventh day of that month the plan was unfolded to him by J. J., which, witness said, was the setting of numerous fires in different parts of the city with machines made for that purpose and the coincident blowing up of the water works system, so that the fire department would be helpless in extinguishing the flames. The time was to be fixed so that the fire would be carried to all parts of the city by favoring winds and the place would be wiped out of existence.

Another plot of which McNamara spoke, but which did not reach any particular development of means in their talks, said the witness, was to organize for a holdup at the Indianapolis speedway in May following, when, he said, there would be not less than $150,000 from receipts in the offices of the Speedway company. The plan was to have the holdup men provided with autos and to make the attack at a certain hour when the crowd's attention would be centered on the races.

"We may have to kill two or three, but what the hell is the difference, if we get the $150,000," said McNamara, according to the dynamiter.

McManigal told of being taken to Detective Reed's house in Chicago, where in a conversation J. B. said: "Every man for himself." McManigal said that in a conversation later with W. J. Burns he (McManigal) told in substance what he knew about the dynamiting plots.

The dynamiter was then turned over to the defense and cross-examination by Senator Kern was begun. Asked by Senator Kern if Hockin terrorized him into going into this work, witness replied that he had. Witness gave a list of explosions that he had pulled off and the amounts he had received for them. They aggregated twenty and he got a total of $3,280.

SPOOK DOINGS

One of the Features of a Trial in Progress at Laporte.

Laporte, Ind., Nov. 26.—Spiritualistic mediums will play a large part in the second trial of the noted Leeds will case, which is in progress in the Porter circuit court.

Mrs. Amelia Leeds, who died possessed of great wealth, her fortune being estimated at from a half to a million dollars, bequeathed the largest part of the estate to her daughter, Mrs. Cushman, a Michigan City society woman, almost disinheriting the son, Otley Leeds, who is the plaintiff in the action.

Mrs. Leeds was a spiritualist, and in seances with mediums she claimed to have been divinely ordered to give her fortune to her daughter. The first trial of the case, which continued nearly two months, resulted in the disagreement of the jury.

Three Killed on Track.

Valparaiso, Ind., Nov. 26.—Frank Conley, aged thirty-five; Joe Resler, aged thirty-two, and Edward Peters, aged thirty-two, unmarried, were instantly killed three miles east of McCool, by a Baltimore & Ohio flyer. There is a double track at McCool. The south track was occupied by an eastbound freight train and the men stepped to the north track, when the flyer, traveling at sixty miles an hour, crashed into them, hurling the three bodies 200 feet from the track.

Fast Train Split Switch.

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 26.—Although four sleepers and two coaches left the track from a Monon train at Ellettsville, no one was seriously injured. All the passengers were badly shaken up, however. The train was traveling thirty-five miles an hour, when it split the switch.

A Boy and a Gun.

Bowling Green, Ind., Nov. 26.—While examining a pistol at his home, two miles southwest of here, Ben Stwalley, aged fourteen, son of Mrs. Barber, accidentally was shot in the breast. The bullet entered the boy's left breast about an inch below the heart.

RECORD CROWD WILL SEE GAME

Rushville-Maxwell Contests Thursday Afternoon Promises to Establish New Attendance Mark

BOTH TEAMS ARE CONFIDENT

Locals Expect Hard Battle From Automakers—Newcastle Coming on Special Train.

Thanksgiving Day in Rushville would hardly be complete without a foot ball game and the one this year between the locals and the Maxwells of Newcastle promises to surpass any of recent years. The Rushville team which will do battle Thursday afternoon with the Automakers is composed of local boys, many of whom were stars in high school and college and the foot ball fans are assured that they will put up their best game against Newcastle.

The Thanksgiving game has always been a big event here and the game this year will probably be attended by a record crowd. The Newcastle team will be accompanied by a crowd of rooters, coming on a special train over the L. E. & W. The train will arrive here shortly before noon. Considerable rivalry exists between the two teams and both will be out to win. The Rushville team is well aware that it will be up against a severe test but members of the team and local supporters believe Maxwell can be trimmed here Thursday.

The local team is in good condition with the exception of Wooster, who suffered a broken nose two Sundays ago. Wooster however has about recovered and will be in the big game. The two teams are about evenly matched as far as weight is concerned and some real foot ball can be expected. In the Newcastle lineup will be seen two men well known in Rushville. They are Stiers and Stough. Stiers is playing in the line and Stough is the quarter back. Stiers is well known here as a foot ball player and is one of the best ever turned out of the local high school. Stough is fast and is considered a good field general. The game will be called at 2:30 o'clock. The two teams will line up as follows:

posal of Wilk & Co. for the construction of said improvement is less than the estimated cost of the same as found by the engineer and viewers, and is the lowest and best bid therefor, and that said Wilk & Co., is the lowest and best responsible bidder therefor.

The record is typewritten. The last "and best" in the above record is an interlineation with pen and ink. Jesse M. Stone, county auditor, testified the interlineation was made by him, and that he suggested it be done. He denied that the commissioners had asked that the two words be inserted.

Mrs. Fanny Study testified that she made the record, and that it was handed to her by the county attorney who wrote the decree.

Jack Ross, attorney for Emsweller, testified that he was present when the commissioners first read the estimates, and that they retired to another room which was private. He said soon the county attorney handed his client's (Emsweller's) bond to him.

Mr. Ross continued that he followed the county attorney into the private room and found Mr. Wilk in there with the commissioners. He said he demanded to know why his client had not received the contract when he had made the lowest estimate.

Joe Brown, the plaintiff, testified he swore to the complaint in the cause before a squire he had never seen before. He said he supposed the attorneys in the case were employed for him. It was brought out that the plaintiff had seen Emsweller only once before he signed the complaint. He was not sure he had talked with Emsweller on that day. He denied Emsweller had agreed to remunerate him for any losses he might suffer in the case.

Brown testified he did not know of his own knowledge of any of the allegations of the complaint. He was put on the stand by the defendants. On cross-examination he asserted that he had no knowledge of the conditions surrounding the awarding of the Apple road contract, other than that Emsweller had told him his bid was the lowest.

Phil Wilk testified he had been in the contract business since 1889 and that he had been building roads for ten years. He said he had $10,000 invested in equipment for contract work.

Mr. Wilk denied in direct examination that the county attorney had acted in the capacity of attorney for him in this case or in any other, with two exceptions, and they were not cases in commissioner's court. He testified that the county attorney representing the bonding house from which he had been procuring bonds for the last four or five years. He testified that he prepared his own estimate on the Apple road.

Mr. Wilk told of incidents in the auditor's office the day the contract was let, which were in substance the same as those told by Mr. Hume. He said that Merrill Ball, a member of the board, came to the door leading into the private room, and announced the results of the conference, and he was called into the room to sign the contract.

Mr. Wilk denied that he had talked with the county attorney concerning this road contract and that he had been in the county attorney's office the morning or afternoon of the day the contract was let. He also denied in answer to questions, that he had talked with the commissioners about this road contract or any other on which he had bid.
